This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION.

THE various errors and defects which we diſcover either in the general hiſtories of England, or in the memoirs and hiſtorical narratives of particular reigns, are rather to be imputed to the negligence and inattention of their authors, in not ſearching after proper materials for correcting and rendering thoſe works more complete, than to any real deficiency of ſuch uſeful aſſiſtants.

Moſt of our hiſtorians who flouriſhed before the reign of king Henry the Seventh were monks. Many of thoſe, reſiding chiefly in their cloyſters, and having but a ſmall fund of erudition, poſſeſſed neither inclination or abilities ſufficient to enable them critically to enquire into and inveſtigate the hiſtory of their own country, as it ſtood in paſt ages, and, therefore, they contented themſelves with implicitly tranſcribing by wholeſale ſuch accounts of our Engliſh affairs as they found inſerted in thoſe hiſtorical manuſcripts, with which the libraries of their own, or ſome neighbouring monaſteries happened to be furniſhed; and that without examining into the credibility either of the ſtories which they adopted, or of the authors from whom they borrowed them. A ſimilar ſupineneſs kept thoſe religious devotees in great meaſure unacquainted with our national affairs, and the political tranſactions of their own times.

Inquiſitiveneſs was not the characteriſtic of the inhabitants of our monaſteries; their reſearches were confined within very narrow bounds, and their attention was principally fixed on the preſervation and aggrandizement of the eccleſiaſtical and monaſtic power and revenues. In fact, they themſelves knew little more of public affairs, than ſuch occurrences as were notorious, and the topicks of general converſation. On this account they were apt to rely too much upon common reports; which, they taking for granted, without further inquiry, put down in their chronicles as truth, although many of them were mere fictions, invented by artful and deſigning men to anſwer ſiniſter views, and were induſtriouſly propagated in order to miſlead the unwary, and impoſe upon the credulity of the people.

It muſt be acknowleged, however, that all our hiſtorians who lived before the Tudor family's acceſſion to the throne, were not of the ſame form. Some of them were anxious for diſcovering the truth of things, and with a moſt laudable and accurate induſtry, ſearched for it amongſt the records of the kingdom; and others; who from their ſituation in or near the courts of our princes, the poſts which they filled in the ſtate, or from the buſineſs in which they were occaſionally employed, had opportunities of being well informed of facts, have made proper uſe of thoſe advantages, and handed down to us very faithful and judicious narratives of the tranſactions of their own times.

Our ſubſequent hiſtorians were men of ſtill ſuperior talents; their ſounder judgments and more refined reaſonings, would not ſuffer them to build on thoſe precarious foundations to which many of their predeceſſors had inadvertently truſted. Cautious of avoiding ſuch errors as had miſguided others, they conducted their labours with greater accuracy and circumſpection; brought to light many curious hiſtorical particulars, which had long remained in obſcurity and unknown; and by a criticiſm till then unpractiſed, ſhewed themſelves indefatigable in diſtinguiſhing truth from fable. Thoſe of more modern times have not only followed that example, but endeavoured to add further illuſtrations to our Engliſh hiſtory, and to authenticate the ſeveral facts which they relate. Such of them, as with a ſcrupulous exactneſs have taken the trouble to examine in every circumſtance, the accounts of tranſactions given in ancient chronicles and annals, and to compare them with the public records and other indubitable muniments preſerved in different archives of the kingdom, have choſen the ſureſt and moſt infallible guides, to lead them on, not only to the inveſtigation of truth, but to the diſcovery of many material circumſtances in our Engliſh hiſtory, which otherwiſe muſt have remained in oblivion; and for theſe ſervices they highly merit our warmeſt acknowlegements.

It is manifeſt, that the public and private libraries of England, jointly conſidered, contain a far more immenſe treaſure of truly uſeful and valuable original papers and manuſcripts for our political and hiſtorical affairs, than that which any one nation in Europe can produce in reſpect to its own; but yet theſe ſtores alone are not of themſelves ſufficient to render our national hiſtory complete. They are vague and uncertain as to ſeveral very intereſting occurrences, totally ſilent in regard to others, and prove ſometimes ſo various, irreconcileable, and even contradictory in the accounts they give us of one and the ſame tranſaction, that without further aſſiſtance it is impoſſible to determine with preciſion, whether either, or which of them may be abſolutely credited. Hence it is, that however cautious and inquiſitive hiſtorians are in collecting their materials from thoſe manuſcripts, and however critical and refined they may be in their reaſonings and arguments on what they find advanced in them, yet, in ſpight of their deepeſt ſpeculation and the moſt unbiaſſed integrity, whilſt they look up no further than to theſe ſources of intelligence, not only they themſelves are in danger of being deceived, and of thereby miſleading others, but the narratives which they give us, and their reaſonings on them, muſt inevitably turn out lame, imperfect, and erroneous. Such miſtakes and diſadvantages, however, cannot attend thoſe who have recourſe to the repoſitories of our national records and muniments, either for the diſcovery and elucidation of facts, or for the ſolution of matters of hiſtoric doubt and controverſy.

Happily for us our ſtores of public records are juſtly reckoned to excel in age, beauty, correctneſs, and authority, whatever the choiceſt archives abroad can produce of the like ſort. By an appeal to them the lawyer and the hiſtorian may receive ſatisfaction in all their inquiries, whether confined to the rectifying the miſtakes into which ſome writers have fallen, and to the clearing up and explaining of thoſe difficulties in our hiſtory which have for a long time ſeemed unſurmountable; or whether they are inlarged and extended to the attainment of a thorough knowlege of the laws, conſtitution, and polity of the kingdom. There likewiſe, beſides informing themſelves of the cuſtoms and manners of our anceſtors, and of the humours which, from time to time, prevailed amongſt them, they will find preſerved the hiſtory of many notable tranſactions, which had otherwiſe periſhed, together with a multitude of curious and inſtructive records, relating to a variety of matters of the utmoſt importance; ſuch are, amongſt others, the proceedings and acts of the high court of parliament; the munificence and liberality of our ſovereigns in their grants of lands, liberties, privileges, and immunities to the churches, abbeys, and monaſteries; to eccleſiaſtical and civil corporations; and to the nobility and private perſons; the proceedings and judicial acts of the exchequer, chancery, curia-regis, king's-bench, and common-pleas; the courts of wards and liveries, ſtar-chamber and requeſts, and of ſeveral ſubordinate and inferior courts; the royal revenue and public finances; trade, merchandize and commerce; the mint, coin, and coinage; the negotiations, treaties, leagues, conventions, and alliances entered into between England and foreign kings, princes, and ſtates; our national connections and intereſts, as they reſpectively ſtood at different periods; the circumſtances of our militia and navy; foreign wars, domeſtic rebellions, commotions, and inſurrections, with their cauſes and effects; papal bulls, uſurpations, exactions, &c. together with many other matters of more private concernment.

From the ſame treaſuries the ſtudent may alſo obtain an ample ſupply of uſeful information relating to the hiſtories of Normandy, Gaſcony, Picardy, Aquitaine, and other parts of France; as alſo to thoſe of Scotland, Ireland, Wales, the iſlands of Guernſey, Sark, Alderney, and Jerſey, and all ſuch other places as do now belong, or at any times heretofore have appertained unto the crown of England; and this with the additional and moſt ſatisfactory aſſurance, that whilſt he adheres to thoſe intelligent regiſters of truth and antiquity, he cannot be deceived or miſled; but that on the contrary, he may with confidence rely on their fidelity; as their evidence is impartial, their verity unimpeached, and their authority indiſputable.

The ſame fertile mine likewiſe offers to us a rich vein of materials for improving and illuſtrating our Engliſh topography beyond what hath hitherto been attempted, either by Mr. Camden or others; and for rendering our local hiſtory and antiquities of eſſential and public uſe. Therein we find the originals of ſome, and memorials of many others of thoſe public inſtruments, which, from time to time, have been iſſued for the purpoſes of improving, protecting, and inriching the different parts of the kingdom in various inſtances; as by imbanking and draining fens, and the recovery and ſecuring from future injuries lands overwhelmed by inundations of the ſea; the opening and clearing our principal rivers, and the widening, deepening, and rendering navigable thoſe of leſs note; the cleanſing and ſecuring harbours for the commodious and ſafe reception of ſhips, and the cutting canals for inland navigation; the erecting and fortifying caſtles, forts, and places of ſtrength, for the defence of the realm, and for providing and maintaining proper wards and garriſons in them; the building bridges, palaces, and public edifices, and the opening roads and communications between the moſt capital places; the deafforeſtation of ancient foreſts and chaſes, and the incloſing and cultivation of wealds, heaths, commons, and waſte lands; the opening and working mines, and the encouragement given for the exportation and diſpoſal of their contents, &c. &c. There likewiſe we learn the ancient and modern ſtate of all the cities, towns, and boroughs of England; the names, dignities, and characters of thoſe who were the ſucceſſive proprietors or owners of them, and the practice and manner of letting them, either to the inhabitants or others; the difference between towns veſted in the crown, and thoſe veſted in the baronage and clergy, as alſo between ſuch as are incorporated, and ſuch as are not incorporated; their tenures, demeſnes, iſſues, fee-farms, and ſervices; their incorporations, charters, cuſtoms, government, rights, privileges, franchiſes, liberties, and immunities, as well ſuch as heretofore have been raviſhed from them, or forfeited by them, as thoſe which they at preſent enjoy; their trade, manufactures, markets, fairs, commerce, and commercial intereſts; the aids, ſubſidies, tallages, fines, amerciaments, and taxes with which they have been charged, or from which they have been relieved or exempt; the guilds, fraternities, corporations, and myſteres eſtabliſhed in them, the caſualties which have befell them, and the manner and occaſions of the decay of ſome, and of the riſe, increaſe, improvement, and proſperity of others: there too we have a faithful account of the rights, privileges, and immunities granted to, or claimed by particular churches, monaſteries, lordſhips, manors, villages, pariſhes, hamlets, and other places, with the cuſtoms prevalent in them; and a multitude of intereſting particulars relating not only to royalties, foreſts, honours, baronies, lordſhips, and the ſeveral inferior ſpecies of landed property, with their reſpective tenures, ſervices, and cuſtoms, but to the ſeveral perſons and families who have ſucceſſively poſſeſſed them.

Great as theſe benefits are to the public, yet they are far from being the moſt important ſervices which the public records and muniments afford us; they are the treaſuries and conſervators of our laws, and the ſtandard to which we muſt reſort for the reſolving and aſcertaining all conſtitutional points; they are the teſtimonies of our legiſlation, and of all juridical and judicial proceedings, and the perpetual evidence of every man's rights, privileges, and liberties.

That the civil and eccleſiaſtical hiſtory of this kingdom cannot be thoroughly underſtood without the aſſiſtance of our national records, was long ago evinced by Mr. Lambard, Sir Robert Cotton, Sir Henry Spelman, Mr. William Ryley, the voluminous William Prynne, Fabian Phillips, &c. and hath ſince been abundantly confirmed to us from the great uſe made of them by Mr. Selden, Dr. Robert Brady, Mr. Tyrrel, biſhops Burnet and Nicholſon, Mr. Rymer, the elaborate Mr. Madox, Mr. Thomas Carte, and many other learned hiſtorians in their reſpective publications.

The eſſential ſervice which they are of, or for the furtherance of our topographical and genealogical hiſtories, hath been put out of all manner of doubt by Sir William Dugdale's Antiquities of Warwickſhire, and his Baronage of England; Mr. Aſhmole's and Mr. Anſtis's Hiſtories of the order of the garter; Sandford's Genealogical hiſtory of our kings; Thoroton's Antiquities of Nottinghamſhire; Biſhop Kennett's Parochial antiquities; Sir Henry Chauncy's Hiſtorical antiquities of Hertfordſhire; and by the late reverend Mr. Morant in his Antiquities of Eſſex.

Antiquaries are not agreed as to the preciſe time when the uſage of making inrollments, or entering authentic teſtimonies in writing on membranes of parchment ſewed together end to end, and wound or rolled up in the form of a pipe or ſmall column, in order to be depoſited and preſerved in proper offices of record, was firſt introduced amongſt us; and at this diſtance of time, from the origin of ſuch inſtitution, it may be difficult, if not impoſſible, to aſcertain with exactneſs the æra of its commencement. Many ancient records and other documents, which might have aſſiſted us in the proſecution of ſuch an inquiry, are now undoubtedly loſt, and the gaps which we obſerve in the ſeries of different kinds of our public muniments now extant, ſtrengthen the opinion, that the earlieſt records of this kingdom have long ſince periſhed.

Mr. Prynne very juſtly obſerves it to be highly probable, "that during "the civil wars between the king and barons, in the reigns of king "John and Henry the Third, and betwixt the two houſes of Lancaſter and "York for the title to the crown, the prevailing king's parties embezled and ſuppreſſed ſuch parliamentary records and proceedings as "made moſt againſt their intereſt, power, and prerogative;" and it cannot be doubted, that in thoſe times, the like fate befell many other of our national muniments. Several different cauſes have likewiſe co-operated to their deſtruction; damps, mildew, and vermin have, from time to time, deprived us of many ancient and valuable records; others may have been loſt by the frequent carrying them from town to town, as was the cuſtomary practice during that period, in which the exchequer, the chancery, and the ſovereign court of ordinary judicature, then ſtiled curia regis, followed, and were kept at the court or place of the occaſional reſidence of the king; ſome undoubtedly fell victims to the diſtractions which raged ſo furiouſly throughout the kingdom during the wars between the empreſs Maud and king Stephen; others have been deſtroyed by rebellious inſurrections, public commotions, and the various injuries of time, and not a few have periſhed through their great enemy duſt, and the negligence in times paſt of ſome of thoſe whoſe duty it then was to preſerve them. Theſe loſſes and defects, which are moſt ſincerely to be deplored by every curious inquirer after our Engliſh hiſtory, will be beſt apprehended, from taking a curſory view of the preſent ſtate, and reſpective commencements, of the principal kinds of our now remaining public records and other muniments.

Neither the articuli ſuper chartas, the great charter of king John, or that of king Henry the Third are to be found upon any of the now extant rolls of either of thoſe kings, although it cannot be imagined that thoſe charters which were obtained with ſo much trouble, difficulty, and bloodſhed, which were eſteemed to be of the utmoſt conſequence and importance to the whole kingdom, and which, when conſented unto, had been granted in the moſt ſolemn manner, and paſſed under the reſpective great ſeals of thoſe monarchs, would have been iſſued and promulgated, without being previouſly inrolled in the records of the chancery.

The writs of ſummons and the returns to parliament begin with thoſe of the forty-ninth year of king Henry the Third; and there is among the records in the Tower of London, a calendar or collection of all attainders, reſtitutions, and reſumptions made out of the parliament rolls, from the twenty-ninth year of that king till the end of his reign; yet the earlieſt parliament rolls now extant, are thoſe of the three parliaments held in the eighteenth year of king Edward the Firſt, unleſs the roll of ſome paſſages in the parliament of Oxford, in the forty-fourth year of king Henry the Third, and which, Mr. Selden ſays, he had uſed by the favour of an honourable gentleman, who communicated it, is now to be found. Moreover the ſeries of the rolls of parliament, ſubſequent to the eighteenth year of king Edward the Firſt, is far from being complete, many of thoſe rolls, and more particularly ſuch as belonged to the reign of king Edward the Third, being now miſſing, and others defective.

The firſt bundle of petitions to parliament, with judgments or reſponſes given on them, now amongſt the records in the Tower of London, are thoſe of the firſt year of king Richard the Second, although it is evident that the uſage of preſenting petitions to parliament was of a far older date. Some of thoſe ancient petitions may probably be in that confuſed heap of blind and obliterated petitions, which now remain in in a cloſet in Wakefield Tower, but many others have undoubtedly periſhed.

Mr. Powell, in his Repertorie of records, p. 212, mentions no leſs than fifteen bundles of petitions in parliament, from the ſecond to the thirtieth year of the reign of king Edward the Third, as being extant in the Tower at the time he publiſhed his book, anno 1631, but at preſent one only of theſe bundles, which is of the ſeventh year of that king, and without any judgments or reſponſes, is to be found in that repoſitory. Neither are there extant any original petitions in the parliaments of that king, ſubſequent to his thirtieth year; even the traces of any ſuch petitions are not now to be met with, except of thoſe of which tranſcripts are entered on the parliament rolls. By what accident we are deprived of the original petitions in the parliaments of king Edward the Second, and of his father king Edward the Firſt, is not now known. Mr. Prynne mentions thoſe of the ſixth year of king

Edward

Edward the Firſt, and of ſeveral ſucceeding years, as being in the Tower of London, when he wrote; and Mr. Riley refers to the ſame place for the originals of nineteen petitions of the thirtieth year of the ſame king, which he hath printed in the appendix to his Placita Parliamentaria. At preſent none of them are to be found, but yet we may ſafely credit the information given to us by thoſe two able and faithful record officers; and that more eſpecially, as not only copies of thoſe petitions, with the reſponſes, are in a manuſcript of that able and venerable Lord Chief Juſtice Sir Matthew Hales, now in the library of Lincoln's Inn; but as there are ſome petition rolls within the aforementioned period ſtill preſerved, and as ſome other of thoſe petitions are likewiſe entered on the dorſe of the patent and clauſe rolls.

Further, the Placita Parliamentaria preſerved in the Tower, do not begin till the reign of king Edward the Second; yet thoſe are not the oldeſt now extant, for there are ſeveral others of the ſame ſort in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, and commencing with thoſe of the firſt parliament of the eighteenth year of king Edward the Firſt: ſome of them, and particularly thoſe of the twenty-firſt and thirty-fifth years of king Edward the Firſt are mutilated and defective. Of theſe latter Placita there is depoſited amongſt the records in the Tower a tranſcript called the Vetus Codex *, written in a hand nearly coeval with the originals: and it was from this manuſcript that Mr. Riley printed the Placita Parliamentaria. It may not be foreign to our purpoſe to obſerve, that the Placita in the Tower are entered on rolls, formed and wound up in the manner now uſed; whereas thoſe in the chapter-houſe are only tacked together at the corner of each membrane.

The moſt ancient ſtatute roll now extant commences with the ſtatute of Glouceſter, paſſed in the ſixth year of king Edward the Firſt: and the rolls from which ſome of our printed ſtatutes were tranſcribed for the preſs are now irrecoverably loſt.

There is only one aſſay roll of the Mint now remaining, and that is of an uncertain year of king Edward the Firſt.

The Placita Coronæ begin as low as the fifteenth year of king Henry the Third; and the commencement of the placita de warranto, is as late as the reign of king Edward the Firſt.

The memoranda and originalia of the court of exchequer do not commence until the firſt year of king Henry the Third, and yet it is evident from entries made on a fine roll, of the eighteenth of Henry the Third, m. 6.

* It doth not appear by what perſon, or on what occaſion this tranſcript was made, but it is mentioned in Rot. Parl. 6 Ric. II. p. 2. m. 26. as being then in the Tower of London.

and on the oblata, of the ſecond of John, m. 5. that the method of making eſtreats of the charter, patent, fine, and other rotuli cancellariæ, on freſh rolls, and tranſmitting them every year into the exchequer, where they were called Originalia and Extractæ Cancellariæ, was obſerved from the time of the ſeparation of the chancery from the exchequer; which event happened at a period many years antecedent to the date of the earlieſt of the Originalia now extant.

The moſt ancient inquiſitiones poſt mortem now remaining in the Tower likewiſe begin with the firſt year of king Henry the Third, about the middle of whoſe reign we are to date the firſt roll or regiſter of writs, although ſuch mandates or precepts are well known to have been commonly iſſued in much earlier times.

The inquiſitiones ad quod damnum commence at a far ſtill later period, to wit, the firſt year of the reign of king Edward the Second, from which time thoſe records are complete, except in reſpect to the bundles of ſome few years.

The now remaining placita foreſtæ, the perambulations, and the proceedings relating to foreſts reach no higher than the tenth year of king John, and yet we may be aſſured that ſuch placita were much more ancient, not only ſince a moſt faithful hiſtorian Henry Huntingdon informs us, that king Stephen in his firſt year hunted at Brampton near Huntingdon, and there held pleas of the foreſt; but becauſe they are expreſsly ſpoken of in the laws of king Henry the Firſt, as then being far from a novel inſtitution.

That accurate and experienced antiquary the late George Holmes, eſquire, deputy keeper of the Tower records, in his valuable work, intituled, CALENDARIUM GENERALE ROTULORUM IN TURRE LONDINENSI ASSERVATORUM, written with his own hand, and now in the library of Thomas Aſtle, eſquire, informs us that the eſcheat bundles do not begin till the firſt year of Henry the Third; although eſcheats had long before that time made part of the crown revenue, and as ſuch appear to have been accounted for in the great roll of the exchequer, commonly called quinto Stephani; which roll will hereafter be ſpoken of more at large in the ſequel of this diſcourſe.

Mr. Selden in his Titles of honour very poſitively aſſerts, that there were patent rolls before the reign of king John, but that they are loſt: however he doth not give us his reaſons for ſuch an aſſertion, neither doth he ſo much as hint either at the place in which thoſe records were originally kept, or at the time or occaſion of our being deprived of them. This aſſertion hath been combated by the late learned Mr. Madox, who declared it to be his opinion, that the contrary may be more probable, as the courſe and uſage of the king's chancery was not always the ſame in every particular. The ſtate of the fact, ſays that able and judicious writer, was this; "In the beginning of the reign of king John, the clerks of the chancery firſt made entries "or inrollments of all charters, letters patents, and cloſe letters, "which paſſed the king's chancery, and his great ſeal; and likewiſe "of all fines made or offered in his chancery. The rolls on which "ſuch entries were made, are therefore reſpectively called ROTULI "CHARTARUM, Charter Rolls; ROTULI PATENTIUM [Scil. Literarum] "Patent Rolls; ROTULI CLAUSARUM [Viz. Literarum] Cloſe Rolls, and "ROTULI FINIUM, Fine Rolls; and that this uſage of writing or making "up of theſe rolls hath continued in the chancery from the reign of "king John to the modern times, may be proved by the ſeries of "rolls of theſe ſorts now extant. On the other ſide it does not "appear from any record or other authentic monument, that the "ſame method was uſed in the chancery before the reign of that king." The ſame learned antiquary likewiſe conjectures, "that in the beginning of the reign of king John, it might juſtly be deemed a proper and "neceſſary thing to inroll the acts of the king's chancery, particularly "the charters, patents, and writs, which, from time to time, paſſed "under the great ſeal; not only that it might be ſufficiently manifeſted "to the king's officers and clerks who had the care and management "of his revenue, what charters, letters, &c. were made forth and "ſealed, and which for want of regular entries or inrollments could "not be truly known; but to prevent the hardſhips which had frequently "been laid on the ſubjects of getting their charters and grants renewed, "and more particularly to quiet the minds of thoſe who in the preceding reign of king Richard the Firſt, on pretence of the king's "ſeal being carried out of the kingdom, and loſt in the ſea, near the "Iſle of Cyprus, had been compelled to renew and paſs, at a great "expence, under the new ſeal which had been fabricated on that occaſion, all the charters and grants which had been made to them under the old ſeal."

The moſt antient records of the chancery which we meet with in the Tower of London being the cloſe rolls and fine rolls of the ſixth year of king John; the patent rolls of his third year; the liberate and Norman rolls of his ſecond year; the charter rolls of his firſt year; and thoſe tranſcripts denominated Chartæ Antiquæ, which contain miſcellaneous exemplatums of charters of our kings more ancient than the times of king John, mixed with others made in his reign, and at that time confeſſedly put together different from the uſual method of the chancery, greatly favour theſe ſentiments of Mr. Madox. The ſeveral facts of which that author aſſures us in his hiſtory of the exchequer, p. 132, &

&c. likewiſe countenance the above opinion. He there tells us, that in the times previous to the reign of king John, the chancery was kept in the king's court, and was in many reſpects blended with and made part of the exchequer, and ſo continued until it ſeparated therefrom; that during ſuch union, the king's chancellor performed part of his duty in the exchequer; attended there ex officio upon the affairs of the revenue, and of courſe acted with the juſticier and barons; that the king's great ſeal was commonly laid up in the treaſury of the exchequer; that not only the writs of the chancery, viz. liberate, computate, and perdono were ſometimes made forth at the exchequer, and ſealed there with the great ſeal, at the juſticier's command from the lower exchequer, or receipt, to the upper exchequer, for the better diſpatch of the exchequer buſineſs, in which caſe they concluded teſtibus his apud ſuch a place ad Scaccarium, to diſtinguiſh them from the writs made in the king's courts; but that the writs of ſummons iſſued for the king's debts and rights, the writs to call councils, and to ſummons barons and knights ad habendum ſervitium, were likewiſe ſometimes made at the exchequer, and ſealed there by the ſpigurnel, or wax-chafer of the chancery, with the great ſeal; and afterwards tranſmitted through England by the uſher of the exchequer; and that there was a clerk conſtantly attending at the exchequer called clericus, or magiſter ſcriptorii, who was as it ſeems a chief clerk of the chancery, and whoſe duty is ſet forth in the dialogus de ſcaccario, as alſo a clerk called Scriptor Rotuli de Cancellaria. The acts of the chancery in thoſe times being thus interwoven with thoſe of the exchequer, and the chief buſineſs of both being principally pointed towards the aſcertaining and preſerving the rights of the king, and the ſecurity and care of the ſeveral branches of the crown revenue, it may be with great probability conjectured, that whilſt the chancery and exchequer continued ſo intimately connected, and were held together in the ſame place, to wit, the king's court; whilſt the chancellor, with the great ſeal, was uſually reſident at the exchequer; and whilſt the acts of the chancery cognizable in the exchequer, were tranſacted at the exchequer, entries of all the acts and proceedings of the chancery, and all the ſeveral inſtruments which paſſed the great ſeal, were not made, per extenſum, on ſeparate and diſtinct rolls, ſo to remain on record according to the method afterwards obſerved in chancery; but that as ſoon as the chancery was ſeparated from the exchequer and held in a different place, the neceſſiy of making diſtinct rolls of the chancery becoming obvious, the great increaſe and variety of buſineſs which about that period flowed to the chancery called for a more exact and particular mode of recording the ſeveral acts of that court, and of the different inſtruments which paſſed under the great ſeal, than had been obſerved before that time, and induced the officers of that court then to begin to make diſtinct rolls of the chancery in a ſeries of years, to wit, charter rolls, patent rolls, fine rolls, and cloſe rolls, and to eſtreat or certify them into the exchequer.

This conjecture is rendered more probable by its not being hitherto diſcovered, as is before obſerved, by any record or authentic document, that ſuch method of inrollments were uſed in the chancery, previous to the ſeparation of that court from the exchequer; an event which happened towards the end of the reign of king Richard the Firſt, or at the beginning of that king of John, and nearly coincides with the date of the firſt roll of the chancery now extant.

We have ſtill preſerved to us the rolls of the Bank or court of Common Pleas from the firſt year of king John's reign; and we are not to look for any records of a much earlier date belonging to that court, as its diviſion or ſeparation from the curia regis did not begin to be made until ſome time about that period.

The preciſe time wherein juſtices errant were firſt conſtituted is not now to be eaſily aſcertained, but the great rolls of the pipe plainly ſhew that the eſtabliſhment of thoſe juſtices was many years prior in time to the 22d year of king Henry the Second, in which year Hoveden, Glanvill, Dugdale, and others, very particularly fix the commencement of that inſtitution, or to the ſixteenth year of that king, in which Gervaſius Dorobernenſis ſays, they were firſt appointed; and yet we have not any aſſize rolls antecedent to the firſt year of king Richard the Firſt.

The oldeſt rolls of the curia regis likewiſe now extant begin with the ſame year, to wit, the firſt of Richard the Firſt, although that ſupreme ordinary court of judicature is well known to have been held in the times near, after the Norman conqueſt, and that from its primary inſtitution certain pleas or cauſes were eſpecially reſerved and appropriated for diſcuſſion therein, ſo that there is not the leaſt doubt but that the proceedings of that court on ſuch cauſes were properly entered on record, but that thoſe records are now loſt.

The plea rolls of the court of exchequer do not begin until the reign of king Edward the Firſt, but the rotuli annales, or great rolls of the pipe, in which the accounts of the revenue are ſtated, are anterior in point of date to any of the rolls which have hitherto been mentioned; and of theſe rolls the ſeries is perfect from the firſt year of king Henry the Second; beſides which there is ſtill remaining in the ſame archives, a great or pipe roll, which bears the ſame name of the fifth of king Stephen, but hath by Mr. Prynne and Mr. Madox been proved beyond all doubt, to be intitled to an earlier date; and more particularly to belong, if not to the eighteenth year of king Henry the Firſt, as Mr. Prynne is inclined to think it doth, yet at leaſt to ſome year of that monarch's reign. This roll, conſidering it as a record, is inconteſtably the oldeſt roll now to be produced; but it is far from being the firſt revenue roll that was framed, in the exchequer of England, as is evident not only from the wording of divers articles entered in different parts of this roll, but from the references therein made to prior matters of like accompt with thoſe in it, and which matters of accompt muſt certainly have been entered on ſimilar great rolls of the pipe anterior to this in point of date.

Having thus taken a tranſient view of the general ſtate of our principal records and muniments, ſo far as any of them now extant are entered on rolls, it may not be inexpedient to inquire how far the uſage of inrollments of matters of record is intitled to a higher antiquity amongſt us, and whether there are any traces whereby the original uſage can be nearly or abſolutely aſcertained.

If we look back into the Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Daniſh times, we do not meet with any footſteps of ſuch uſage being then practiſed, either in the great national council, or in any of the courts of law. The regal charters and grants iſſued during that period were moſtly either ſingle inſtruments authenticated by the ſignature of the king, and teſtified by the ſubſcription of the names of the principal perſons preſent at the time ſuch charters or grants were originally made, or bi-partite chirographa authenticated and witneſſed in the like manner. In the latter caſe both parts of each chirographum being made originals, the one part was delivered to the church, monaſtery, vill, or perſon in whoſe favour ſuch charter or grant was obtained, and the other part remained in the poſſeſſion of the king. Sometimes, although but rarely, they made three originals of the ſame charters; ſo was it done in reſpect to the charters whereby king Canute, in his great council held at Kingſton in Surrey, granted Folkeſtane now Folkſtone in Kent to the church of Canterbury, as appears by one of thoſe originals now in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Aſtle, eſquire, which concludes thus:

And ƿiſſena ᵹeƿꞃita ſynd ƿꞃeo. an iſ innon Cꞃiſteſ cyꞃcean. ⁊ oðeꞃ æt ſce Auguſtine. And ꝥ ƿꞃidde iſ inne mid þæſ kyngeſ hagdome: i. e.

Et horum brevium tria ſunt. Unum in eccleſia Chriſti; alterum in monaſterio Sancti Auguſtini; et tertium in theſauro regis cum reliquiis ſanctorum.

but in none of theſe caſes was there any regiſtry or entry of ſuch acts made in official rolls, books, or records, preſerved for ſuch purpoſe in the king's or in any other court.

In like manner the original acts of the Saxon councils and ſynods were ſingle inſtruments conſtantly written on both the ſides or pages of a leaf of vellum, and witneſſed by the king who preſided, and the great men there preſent, without any regiſtry or record thereof being made in any roll or book. Thus the acts of the great council held a Beccancelde [*] an° 716, wherein Wihtred king of Kent granted the privileges of the Engliſh church, are written on one ſide of a leaf of vellum; after which follows:

✠ Ego Wihtredus auxilio X^ti rex his legib. conſtitutis pro me et Werburgam reginam [†] itemq; filio nro Alrico ſubſcripſi.

✠ Ego Berhtuualch gra dei archieps his legibus a nobis conſtitutis Scis.

✠ Signum manus Æthelberhti, p-ſe et fre ſuo.

Theſe occupying the whole ſpace of the one ſide of the leaf, the ſubſcriptions of the numerous other witneſſes are continued on the backſide thereof.

The proceedings in pleas or cauſes, all of which were in thoſe times heard and determined in a plain ſimple manner, in the courts within the ſeveral counties, towns, and diſtricts, and the judgments given thereon, do not appear to have been entered on record in any of thoſe courts, but on ſuch occaſions it was uſual to draw up ſedente curia, a ſummary ſtate of the proceedings, by way of notification or certificate, at the cloſe whereof, the names of the witneſſes, or principal perſons preſent at the trial were ſet down; and ſuch notification or certificate being then delivered to the party, on whoſe behalf judgment had been pronounced, was uſually by him, for further notoriety, and in perpetuam rei memoriam, entered in the evangeliſterium, miſſal, or other remarkable and ſacred book, belonging to ſome cathedral, monaſtery, or religious houſe in his neighbourhood. Thus a memorial or ſummary of the proceedings had, and of the judgment given in a cauſe between Edwine Euneawne, and his mother, touching the right to certain lands called Weolintun and Credeſleah, heard and determined in the county court of Hereford, in the reign of king Canute, being drawn up before the riſing of that court, were, by Thurkill the agent for the prevailing party, regiſtered in an evangeliſterium then belonging to the monaſtery of St. Æthelbert, within the city of Hereford, and now remaining in the library of that cathedral; which regiſtry concludes:

Ðuꞃcıll ꞃad ða ꞇo ꞅce Æþelbeꞃhꞇeꞅ mýnꞅꞇꞃe be ealleꞅ þæꞅ ꝼolceꞅ leaꝼe. ⁊ ᵹeƿıꞇneꞅꞅe. ⁊ leꞇ ꞅeꞇꞇan on ane Cꞃıꞅꞇeꞅ boc. i. e.

The original notification of the ſuit between Wynfleda and Leofwine, in the reign of king Æthelred, concerning lands at Hacceburne and Bradenfeild, ſtill preſerved in the Cotton Library, concludes:

Þýſeſ ƿæſ ælꝼᵹaꞃ þæſ cýninᵹeſ ᵹeꞃeꝼa ꞇo ᵹeƿiꞇneſſe. ⁊ býꞃhꞇꞃic ⁊ leoꝼꞃic æꞇ hƿiꞇe cýꞃcan. ⁊ meniᵹ ᵹod man ꞇo eacan him: i. e.

Hujus autem rei teſtis erat Ælfgarus regis vicecomes, et BYRHTRICUS, et LEOFRICUS WHITECERCENSIS atque inſuper multi probi homines qui in conſentu aderant.

The inſtrument or purchaſe deed of the half hyde of Malves hyllæ, made in the county court of Hereford, by Leofwine, likewiſe concludes with, on ꞅƿeᵹneſ eoꞃleſ ᵹeƿiꞇneſſe, &c. and was entered in a monaſtic evangeliſterium. The original inſtruments of the placitum in the ſynod held at Cloſeſhoum by king Beornuulf, anno DCCCXXIIII, in which Uulfrid, archbiſhop of Canterbury, recovered certain lands at Oeſwalum Folcanſtane, Judgminſter, and Godmerſham, in conſequence of a grant made by earl Aldberht and his ſiſter Selcthryth, is now extant *, and appears to be written on both ſides of a ſingle leaf of vellum, with the names of the king and the principal perſons preſent ſubſcribed thereto, and was moſt probably regiſtered in ſome evangeliſterium, or other monaſtic book belonging to the church of Canterbury, now loſt.

Further, that this method of recording or perpetuating in ſacred books belonging to the religious houſes, the memory not only of placita in the courts of judicature, but of purchaſes and donations of land; the ſales, emptions, and manumiſſions of ſervants; the purgations of perſons accuſed of criminal acts; teſtamentary deviſes; the buying and donations of moveables; general and ſpecial acquittances; the inſtitution of gilds or fraternities, and other public acts of notoriety, prevailed in England, during the Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Daniſh times, is ſufficiently and fully proved, by the many inſtances thereof given in the learned Dr. Hicks's moſt elaborate Diſſertatio Epiſtolaris, addreſſed to Sir Bartholomew Shower. The innovations and alterations in the Engliſh laws, introduced by William the Firſt, ſoon after the conqueſt, do not ſeem to have totally eradicated this uſage; for the ſame learned author favours us with a copy of a grant of tithes to the abbey of Barking, made after the coming in of the Normans, which for want of a better method of recording being then known, was, as he aſſures us, written in an evangeliſterium of that abbey.

* In the poſſeſſion of Mr. Aſtle.

We are not told from what authentics it was that Ernulfus biſhop of Rocheſter, tranſcribed into the Textus Roffenſis, the famous placitum in the county court at Pinenden, between Lanfranc archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Odo biſhop of Bayeux, in the time of William the Firſt, for lands belonging to the archbiſhopric, and that other placitum which was tried in the ſame reign, between Gundulphus biſhop of Rocheſter, and Pichot, ſheriff of Cambridgeſhire, for lands in Giſelham; but as Ernulphus flouriſhed in the times wherein thoſe controverſies were determined, and ſucceeded to the ſee of Rocheſter, within ſeven years after the death of Gundulphus, it is moſt probable, that he took them from the original notifications or memorials, which were then undoubtedly extant.

That the uſage of making ſuch notifications or memorials of placita heard before the king himſelf in his own court, prevailed in the reign of William the Conqueror, and of their being ratified by the ſignatures of the king, and likewiſe of the queen, if preſent, we have a notable inſtance. The original of one of thoſe inſtruments drawn up in the year 1072, and mentioned by William of Malmſbury in his Hiſt. lib. 3. p. 117. being now in the archives of the church of Canterbury, from whence it was printed at large by Mr. Madox in his Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 5. and runs thus: Anno ab incarnatione, D. N. I. C. milleſimo ſeptuageſimo ſecundo, pontificatus autem domini papæ Alexandri undecimo, regni vero Willelmi glorioſi regis Anglorum et ducis Northmannorum ſexto, ex precepto ejuſdem Alexandri papæ, annuente eodem rege, in præſentia ipſius, et epiſcoporum, atque abbatum, ventilata eſt cauſa de primatu quem Lanfrancus Dorobernenſis archiepiſcopus, ſuper Eboracenſem eccleſiam jure ſuæ eccleſiæ, proclamabat. Huic conſtitutioni conſencerunt præfatus rex, et archiepiſcopi, Lanfrancus Cantuarienſis, et Thomas Eboracenſis, et cæteri qui interfuerunt epiſcopi. Ventilata eſt autem hæc cauſa, prius apud Uuentanam civitatem, in Paſcali Solemnitate, in capella regis que ſita eſt in caſtello; poſtea in villa regis quæ vocatur Uuinidiſor, ubi et finem accepit in præſentia regis, epiſcoporum, et abbatum diverſorum ordinum, qui congregati erant apud curiam regiam, in feſtivitate Pentecoſtes.

In thoſe earlier ages preceding the conqueſt, when the lands of England were principally veſted in the crown, the church, and the nobility, when perſonal property was ſmall and trifling, and trade and commerce (excepting in ſuch things as were either neceſſary for the defence and ſupport of life, or for ſupplying the immediate exigencies of the ſtate) were little thought of or attended to; ſuits at law, eſpecially touching matters of importance, could be but few; ſo that it cannot be expected, that the preſerving the memory of the proceedings in thoſe cauſes, and the judgments given thereon, ſhould then appear ſo advantageous, as to ſuggeſt the uſe of eſtabliſhing any mode of officially recording them in the courts, wherein ſuch cauſes had been tried; and more eſpecially in times, when our kings and their nobility were ſo much employed in preſerving themſelves, and defending their country, from the piraces and invaſions of foreigners, as not to have leiſure to think of making refinements in civil polity; and much leſs, of framing improvements in the forms and practice of the courts of judicature. It is, evident, that in thoſe times, the care of the revenue, and the regular and punctual collecting of that, and of the taxes aſſeſſed upon the lands of England, were conſidered as neceſſary and weighty objects of attention. And when we find that Danegeld was collected with ſuch ſtrictneſs, that in default of payment by the owners of the lands on which ſuch geld was aſſeſſed, any other perſon might pay the ſame, and in conſequence thereof inſtantly become the proprietor of thoſe lands; it cannot be doubted, but that ſome regular and exact forms were ſtrictly obſerved in the royal treaſury, not only in the ſtating and perpetuating the accompts there proffered, as well of thoſe payments which were actually made and applied, as of ſuch as remained behind hand or in charge; but in the entering and recording thoſe final accompts, which being made up and paſſed by the proper officers, intituled, the Accomptant to his Quietus. It is not indeed at preſent known in what manner ſuch accompts of receipt and expenditure were entered or regiſtered; or whether the ſame were entered on rolls, or in books, there not being the leaſt fragment of any ſuch accompts now remaining, ſo far at leaſt as hath hitherto been diſcovered.

King Alfred, as ſoon as he found himſelf freed from thoſe enemies, which in the beginning of his reign had diſturbed the public tranquillity, in order to put a ſtop to the diſorders and licentiouſneſs which the wars had cauſed, ordered a ſurvey of the whole kingdom to be made, divided it into certain counties, hundreds, and tithings; and having framed ſundry laws relating thereto, cauſed a tranſcript of them and of the ſurvey to be made, and depoſited for public uſe in his then new-built abbey of Wincheſter, where that tranſcript acquired the appellation of DOME BOC or the JUDGES DIRECTORY, and was afterwards commonly called ROTULUS WINTONIÆ; however, whether ſuch tranſcript was written on a roll, or entered in a book, cannot now be aſcertained, as it hath in all probability long ſince been entirely loſt. Mr. Selden enquired after it in vain, not having been able, as he aſſures us, upon the moſt diligent ſearch to meet with the ſmalleſt fragment or trace of it.

William the Norman in the twentieth year of his reign, anno 1086, completed that noble ſurvey of all the cities, towns, villages, and lands in the kingdom, which forms the famous LIBER CENSUALIS TOTIUS ANGLIÆ, or as it is emphatically called DOMESDAY BOOK, the moſt ancient and ineſtimable record that this or any other country can boaſt of. This ſurvey is written in two pretty large bound books of different ſizes; whereas, had the method of inrollment or entering records on long rolls of vellum, as now uſed, prevailed in the king's exchequer at the time this ſurvey was finiſhed, it cannot be doubted but that William's zeal for the preſervation and perpetuating of a work which was then eſteemed to be of the utmoſt importance to the crown and to the public, and which had been formed from inquiſitions taken by his juſtices or commiſſioners with ſuch care and exactneſs, that as a very good judge obſerves, every man's right thereby received a new evidence, without any injuſtice in the digeſting of it being complained of, would have induced that monarch to order ſuch ſurvey to have been written on rolls, rather than tranſcribed on leaves, and bound up in books, which from their ſtructure are much more liable to injuries and decay, than membranes of vellum, when wrapped or wound up in form of a roll.

Mr. Caſley, in the Appendix to his Catalogue of the MSS. in the king's library, hath engraven a ſpecimen of the characters of a MS. in the Cotton Library, Vitellius C. VIII. 13. which he ſays is one of thoſe ROLLS or returns out of which, probably, Domeſday Book was made. Should that truly be the caſe, it might furniſh an argument for the uſage of entering matters of record on rolls, being of higher antiquity than can otherwiſe be allowed; ſo that an examination into the real ſtate of that MS. becomes the more neceſſary.

On inſpection it appears to conſiſt of fourteen membranes of vellum written on one ſide only, and paſted on the leaves of part of another manuſcript. The fire which in the year 1731, burnt part of the Cottonian Library, hath ſhrivelled the upper end of theſe membranes, but not ſo much as to render the writing on them illegible. All of them appear to be of the ſame breadth, but they are of unequal lengths; ſo that notwithſtanding the text is written upon equi-diſtant ruled lines, yet the membranes differ conſiderably from each other, in the number of lines which they reſpectively contain; ſome having more and others leſs, varying from twenty-nine to thirty-ſeven lines.

On the right hand ſide of each of thoſe membranes is left a narrow margin; that of each membrane being of the ſame breadth with the margins of the others; but the writing is continued to the extremity of the membranes, on the left hand. From hence it may with great reaſon be concluded, that theſe membranes were formerly ſewed together end to end, and formed a long roll, although the marks made by the needle in tacking or ſewing the membranes together, are not now viſible; the upper and lower end of each membrane having evidently been cut off cloſe to the writing, at the time of their being paſted into the book in which they are now placed. That theſe membranes once formed ſuch a roll, is further confirmed by a ſmall ſlit which appears to have been made near the bottom of the laſt or concluding membrane, for paſſing through it and faſtening one end of the ſtring or ligature of the roll, although that piece of the membrane which was beneath the ſlit, is now torn off. Had theſe membranes then compoſed one of the original inquiſitions returned into the exchequer, from the juſtices or commiſſioners appointed by William the Firſt to make his famous ſurvey of England, as Mr. Caſley ſuggeſts they did, ſuch inquiſition would have been full evidence, that the uſe of ROLLS for the entry of matters of buſineſs and record was practiſed in England ſoon after the conqueſt.

But on peruſal of theſe membranes, which contain great part of the ſurvey for the county of Kent, it appears, that the poſſeſſions of each great land-holder therein mentioned, although ſituated in ſundry different hundreds and parts of the county, are brought together, and claſſed under the general heads of terra regis, terra archiepiſcopi Cantuar', and of this or that biſhop or religious houſe, or great lord or land-holder.

Great part of the writing on the firſt membrane is obliterated; but on the ſecond membrane we have,

TERRA CANONICOR. S. MARTINI DE DOVRA.

In leſt de Eſtrede habebant canonici de Sc°. Martino T. R. E. XXI ſolin'. in hundr de Cornely et in hundr de Beauſſeberge in leſt de linuvarlet habeb. III. ſolins unum in eſtrede hundr alium in beliſolt hundr et tertium in blacheſborn hundr T. R. E. erant prebende communes et reddebant LXI. lib. int. totu modo ſunt diviſe p. ſingulos p. epum baioc.

Further, in the third membrane we have,

XIII. Albericus Capellanus.

After which follows an account of all the lands of each of theſe tenentes brought together and claſſed under the reſpective names or titles of ſuch tenentes. Whereas the original inquiſitions from whence Domeſday Book was formed, were taken by a jury impanelled and ſworn for each hundred ſeparately; ſo that an account of the lands of each individual land-holder ſituate in ſuch particular hundred, was taken and returned in the inquiſition for that hundred ſeparately, and without mentioning or paying any regard to ſuch other eſtates, as the ſame land-holder happened to poſſeſs in the different hundreds of the ſame county; and it was not till after the returns of the inquiſitions for all the ſeveral hundreds within that county had been made, that all the ſeveral eſtates of each individual land-holder, lying diſperſed in the different hundreds of the county, were extracted from the reſpective inquiſitions, and claſſed together under the name or title of ſuch land-holder. Secondly, In this MS. the account of the Servi, Villani, Cotarii, Bordarii, &c. as alſo many paragraphs inſerted in moſt of the ſections in Domeſday, are intirely and purpoſely omitted. Thirdly, The hand-writing in this MS. although ſmall, and nearly ſimilar to that in which the greater volume of Domeſday is written, is more modern, being that commonly uſed in the reign of king Henry the Firſt. And laſtly, ſeveral of the marginal references which occur in the greater Domeſday of the exchequer, are tranſcribed and incorporated into the text of this MS. From what hath been here obſerved, it is therefore plain, that the MS. now under conſideration, is not intitled either to the honour Mr. Caſley confers on it, of being one of the original inquiſitions from whence the Domeſday of William the Conqueror was framed; or to the character given of it by Mr. Smith, who, in his catalogue of the Cottonian Library, calls it Pars libri cenſualis vocati DOMESDAY continens deſcriptionem cantii. Charactere antiquo et temporibus regis W. I. competente; but, that on the contrary, it is a tranſcript, ſomewhat abridged, of part of the conqueror's Domeſday, and in all probability is one of thoſe rolls or copies, which in antient times it was uſual for great lords, and others, to have made for their private uſe, and in which, only particular parts, and not the whole county, were tranſcribed. Such were thoſe which Dr. Gale, in his Script' Angl', vol. III. p. 795, mentions to have been taken for the archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the abbies of Croyland, Ely, and Worceſter.

No other MS. at preſent known, hath juſt pretenſions to be deemed one of the original inquiſitions for Domeſday: perhaps little attention was paid to their preſervation, after the conqueror's DOMESDAY BOOK had been compiled and ratified by the royal authority. Sir Henry Spelman, Mr. Selden, and many other celebrated antiquaries of the laſt and preſent century, have been indefatigable in their enquiries after thoſe original inquiſitions; but the reſult of all their labours hath amounted to no more than the diſcovery of a copy of the inquiſition for part of Cambridgeſhire, bound up with the famous Liber Elienſis, now in the Cottonian Library, Tiberius, A. VI—4. both which MSS. as appears by a note written at the bottom of the firſt page of the volume, were given to Sir Robert Cotton, by that induſtrious antiquary Mr. Arthur Agarde, one of the then chamberlains of the exchequer. This MS. is, however, written in double columns on both ſides the leaf, and was evidently taken in the reign of king Henry the Third, and not in the time of Henry the Second, as Mr. Webb in his further Account of DOMESDAY Survey ſuppoſes.

The library of the cathedral church of Exeter contains a moſt venerable ancient MS. being the Domeſday for part of the five weſtern counties of Cornwall, Devon, Dorſet, Wilts, and Somerſet; but this MS. being confeſſedly written on both the ſides or pages of a number of ſeparate leaves of vellum put together in form of a book, it is not material for the preſent purpoſe, to enquire, whether it ever was part of an original volume of Domeſday, the reſt of which is now loſt; or is a tranſcript from the Domeſday now remaining in the exchequer; or whether it is either a compilation made from the original inquiſitions, and co-eval with Domeſday Book, or anterior thereto in point of date, and drawn up from the inquiſitions, previous to their being returned by the taxors or commiſſioners into the king's exchequer.

Ingulphus, abbot of Croyland, an hiſtorian of undoubted credit, who lived in the reign, and was an attendant upon the court of William the Norman, ſpeaking of the famous ſurvey made by that monarch, gives it the appellation of ROTULUS. Ipſe Rotulus, ſays that writer, vocatur ROTULUS WINTONIÆ, et ab Anglicis pro ſua generalitate, omnia totius terræ integri continente, DOMESDAY cognominatur; and then adds, talem ROTULUM et multum ſimilem, ediderat quondam rex Alfredus, qui quidam ROTULUS WINTONIÆ vocatus eſt, quia diſponebatur apud Wintoniam, conſervandus.

In like manner Mr. Hearne, in his preface to Hemingi Chartularium eccleſiæ Wigornenſis, ſpeaking of king Alfred, ſays, ipſe librum DOMESDAY confici curaverat, ROTULUM, a loco ubi recondebatur, WINTONIÆ, haud raro vocitatum. However Ingulphus is not to be underſtood as making uſe of the word ROTULUS in this paſſage, to denote a roll or number of pieces either of parchment, or vellum wound up together in a cylindrical form, in contra-diſtinction to the Saxon word BOC or book, but as uſing that word in the ſame ſenſe with RECORDUM, a record, for in a line or two after, he informs us of the matter contained in the DOMESDAY of William the Norman, and then goes on with ſaying; adivi ego ipſe tunc Lundonias; et hec tenementa noſtra, de UTROQUE ROTULO prædicto vulgariter ab Anglicis cognominato DOMESDAY excepta, multo ſtudio, ac non parvis ſumptibus, ſtatui meis poſteris ſaltem breviter annotare, plurima abbrevians, ac nonnulla latius declarans, ad meliorem meorum ſucceſſorum notitiam. Quod ſi quis poſterorum, de verbo ad verbum, prout diffuſe in dictis ROTULIS ORIGINALIBUS tenementa noſtra conſcribuntur agnoſcere maluerit, dictos ROTULOS petat et diligentur exquirat, &c. &c.

Now as it is evident from the above cited paſſage, that at the time Ingulphus wrote his hiſtory, the DOMESDAY of Alfred was extant at Wincheſter, as truly as that of king William the Norman was preſerved in the exchequer at Weſtminſter; and that Ingulphus had frequently ſeen, and was converſant in both of thoſe ſurveys, and conſequently muſt well know that the conqueror's Domeſday was written in books and not on rolls: had the ſurvey of king Alfred been entered on one or more roll or rolls, he would not have applied the appellation ROTULUS to both of thoſe ſurveys indiſcriminately, as he hath profeſſedly done, but would have written with greater accuracy and preciſion, and have ſtiled Alfred's ſurvey ROTULUS, and that of William either codex, LIBER, or BOC. Giraldus Cambrenſis, lib. II. cap. 6, and the author of the Dialogus de Scaccario, ſpeaking of William's ſurvey, both make uſe of the word ROTULUS; and in like manner the judicious Mr. Madox in his Diſceptatio Epiſtolaris calls the ſame ſurvey ROTULUS CENSUALIS; whereas neither of thoſe writers, nor the accurate Mr. Thomas Hearne aforementioned, all of whom well knew, and had frequently had recourſe to that ſurvey, would have made uſe of the word ROTULUS had they intended by that word, to ſpeak of or ſignify a ROLL in contradiſtinction to CODEX, or LIBER, a BOOK. That foreign writers, equally with thoſe of our own country, make uſe of the word ROTULUS as ſynonimous with LIBER or CODEX, we have ſeveral inſtances.

The regiſtries of the judiciary acts of the empire, and the chartularies of the emperors, both which began to be uſed in the Eaſt and Weſt, about the reign of Theodoſius the younger, are by the hiſtorians called ROTULI, although ſuch judiciary acts, and the charters granted by the emperors were written and recorded in Books. Durandus, lib. I. Ration. cap. 3. num 11. ſays, Prophetas et apoſtolos depingi ſolere cum ROTULIS vel LIBRIS. Ordericus. Vitalis, lib. III. & XI. p. 495, uſes the word ROTULUS to the ſame purport, and many other inſtances of the like ſort are given by Monſieur Dufreſne in his Gloſſarium, voce ROTULUS. Moreover the learned Hincmar conſtantly makes uſe of the word ROTULA to expreſs a familiar letter or epiſtle.

Fabian in his chronicle mentions a very ancient regiſter or DOM-BOC, which in his time was preſerved with the utmoſt veneration in the archives of the city of London, and in which the names of the portgereves, together with the laws and cuſtoms of that city, were recorded: and this he ſays, was not written on a ROLL, but conſiſted of a number of leaves bound up together in form of a BOOK.

William the conqueror did not ſurvive the completing of his ſurvey much longer than one year, and it is likely that the uſage of inrollments had not then gained any footing, either in the courts of law, or in the chancery, although rolls might at that time have been uſed in the king's exchequer, for recording the ſeveral articles of charge and diſcharge, and other matters of the revenue accompts. Richard Fitz-Nigel, biſhop of London and treaſurer to king Richard the Firſt, aſſures us in his Dialogus de Scaccario, that the rotuli annales of king Henry the Firſt were remaining at the exchequer in his time; and Alexander de Swereford, archdeacon of Salop, who in the third year of king Henry the Third was a clerk in the exchequer, afterwards one of the barons, and the compiler of the red-book, tells us, that he had ſeen a few of them, and ſuggeſts, that ſome rotuli annales were framed in the reign of William the Firſt, although he candidly owns that he knew of no perſon who in his time had ſeen them.

Having already ſpoken of the rolls of the chancery it will be neceſſary to mention in this place, that in the very early times it was uſual to make up annually, a duplicate of the great roll of the pipe or treaſurers roll, for the chancellor, who was a check upon the treaſurer. Theſe counter rolls were called rotuli cancellarii, and muſt be carefully diſtinguiſhed from the rotuli cancellariæ, which originated in the department of the chancery. Some of thoſe rotuli cancellarii are now extant. The duplicate of the great rolls of the ſixth year of king Richard the Firſt, and of the ſeventh of king John, are now in the Tower; and a duplicate of the great roll of the third year of king John is in the Chapter-Houſe, as is alſo the original great roll of the fourth year of king John, together with the chancellor's duplicate thereof.

That a ſcaccarium or exchequer is not mentioned in any Engliſh hiſtory or monument of antiquity written before the conqueſt, and was unheard of in England during the Anglo-Saxon times; that the very word ſcaccarium and all the terms of art uſed there are Normannick; that moſt of the ſolemn and emphatical words uſed in the exchequer are of Norman extraction; and that the great officers who preſided in the exchequer of England, were all or moſt of them new; that is, had different functions or powers from thoſe which the great officers of the king's court or palace enjoyed in the Anglo-Saxon times; hath been ſo fully and plainly evinced by Mr. Madox, as not to leave the leaſt ſhadow of doubt, that the exchequer was introduced into England by William the conqueror, and of its being of Norman original. It cannot but be ſuppoſed that the Normans, when they eſtabliſhed an exchequer in England, brought over with it the various modes and cuſtoms obſerved in that of Normandy, and amongſt others the form and uſage of entering their revenue accompts, and the acts of their princes court, on vellum rolls. That they did ſo, is in great meaſure confirmed by the great ſimilarity between the Engliſh great rolls of the pipe, and the great rolls of the exchequer in Normandy. Moſt of thoſe latter rolls, are probably now loſt, but happily there is ſtill remaining amongſt the Tower records, a great roll of the Duchy of Normandy, which ſome years ſince was recovered by Mr. Holmes out of a confuſed heap of records that lay in the White Tower, and is indorſed in a co-eval hand writing, ANNO AB INCARNATIONE DNI M° LXXX° III° APUD CADOMUM WILLEMO FILIO RADULFI SENESCALLO NORMANNIE. And whoever may compare this roll with the Engliſh great rolls or pipe rolls of the ſame age, will ſoon find that they are ſo like in character, method, and manner of entry, that they are hardly to be diſtinguiſhed from each other.

From what hath already been obſerved it may reaſonably be conjectured that the uſage of making inrollments of ſuch matters as paſſed the king's chancery, and of the judicial acts of the king's court, were poſterior in point of time to the uſe of rolls for the entry and recording thereon the revenue accompts proffered and paſſed in the receipt part of the king's exchequer; that the advantages and benefits reſulting from ſuch method of preſerving the memory of matters of publick accompts ſoon became ſo apparent, as, in all probability, within a ſhort time after to point out and introduce the uſage of inrollments in the curia regis; that from thence it was in the next place adopted by the chancery and king's bench, on their reſpective ſeparations from the king's exchequer, where the uſe of rolls had primarily taken its riſe; and that afterwards it extended itſelf to the common pleas, and from thence to the ſeveral other courts of the kingdom.

The great benefits which accrued from theſe inrollments, and the aſſiſtance they afforded in aſcertaining and ſecuring every man's rights as well as thoſe of the crown, added ſuch weight and importance to the public records and muniments, that we find the royal authority interpoſing very early, not only for their ſafe cuſtody and preſervation, but for the regular ſorting and arrangement of them, in ſuch manner as might be moſt conducive to the eaſe and benefit of the public.

King Edward the Second in the fourteenth year of his reign, by his writ of privy ſeal directed to the treaſurer, barons, and chamberlains of his exchequer, commanded them forthwith to employ proper perſons to ſuperintend, methodize, and digeſt all the rolls, books, and other writings of the times of his progenitors, kings of England, then remaining in the treaſuries of his exchequer, and in the Tower of London, all which as he declares, were not at that time diſpoſed in ſuch manner as they ought to have been, for his and the publick ſervice. The ſame king on the third of December, in the ſixteenth year of his reign, commanded the treaſurer and chamberlains to cauſe all papal bulls, charters, and other muniments touching his ſtate and liberties within England, Ireland, Wales, Scotland, and Ponthieu, then remaining in the four treaſuries of the exchequer, the wardrobe, and ſundry other places, to be regularly ſorted, and calendars of them to be made; and on the twenty-fourth day of July following he appointed Robert de Hoton and Thomas de Sibthorp to examine, and methodize, all ſuch charters, writings, and other national muniments, as at that time were depoſited in the caſtles of Pontefract, Tuttebury, and Tunbridge; as alſo ſuch as had been newly brought into the Tower of London; and all thoſe which were then kept in the houſe of the Black or Friars Preachers, within the city of London; ſtrictly enjoining the keepers and conſtables of thoſe caſtles, and the prior of the order of friars preachers, to allow the ſaid Robert de Hoton and Thomas de Sibthorp, free acceſs to ſuch ſeveral records for the purpoſe aforeſaid, and to be aiding and aſſiſtant to them.

Inſtances of the like kind frequently occur in ſubſequent reigns, as appears by the ſeveral writs now remaining on record—De ſupervidendo Rotulos, &c.—De Rotulis et Scriptis in recto ordine ponendis.—De Bullis, Chartis, &c. in Kalendari certo ponendis.—De Scrutinio cartarum faciendo.—De Liberatione rotulorum.—De expenſis Clericis miniſtrandis.—De defectibus Domus pro rotulis ordinatæ reparandis, &c.

The keeping of the rolls or records of the chancery was confeſſedly veſted in the chancellor ever ſince the firſt ſeparation of his court from the king's exchequer; but in proceſs of time, and particularly, after our Engliſh Juſtinian king Edward the Firſt had reduced our law into order and writing, the number of royal charters began to multiply, the duty of the chancellor was increaſed and enlarged, the petitions and complaints of plaintiffs became more numerous, and the power and dignity of the chancellorſhip grew much greater than they had formerly been; ſo that on theſe accounts, as alſo by reaſon the chancellor in conſequence of the ſtatute 28 Edw. I. cap. 5. was obliged to be conſtantly attendant upon the king's court, which in thoſe times frequently removed from place to place diſtant from London, it was thought neceſſary to relieve him from the more immediate keeping of the chancery records, and to place them under the cuſtody of an officer to be appointed for that particular purpoſe. Accordingly William de Armyn was with the conſent of the chancellor John de Sandale appointed maſter or keeper of the rolls, and had the cuſtody of them committed to him in the 20th year of king Edward the Second.

On the 2d day of December in the 14th year of king Edward the Third, all the rolls, bundles, and memoranda of the chancery then in the cuſtody of John de St. Paul, keeper of thoſe rolls, were tranſmitted to the Tower of London purſuant to the king's writ, and there delivered into the cuſtody of William de Kildeſby, keeper of the king's privy ſeal, who, on the Tueſday after the feaſt of the Circumciſion then next following, delivered them over to Thomas de Eveſham on his being ſworn into the office of keeper of the Tower records. This ſeems to have been the earlieſt tranſmiſſion made of the chancery records to the Tower of London after the inſtitution and eſtabliſhment of the office of maſter of the rolls. We likewiſe find that the ſame king, for the better reception and preſervation of the chancery and parliament records, until ſuch time as they ſhould be removed into the Tower of London, by letters patent annexed the houſe of converted Jews, ſituate in Chancery Lane, to the office of Cuſtos Rotulorum Cancellariæ, having previouſly allotted an apartment in the Tower of London called Wakefield's Tower, to be the repoſitory of thoſe records, after every tranſmiſſions of them from the cuſtody of the maſter of the rolls.

Since that time we likewiſe find the king's writs frequently iſſued for the removal of the records of the courts of king's bench and common pleas into the treaſuries of the exchequer.

But notwithſtanding theſe precautions, and the provident care of our kings, the alterations neceſſarily made from time to time in our laws, and in the adminiſtration of juſtice, the erection of new courts of judicature, and the diſſolution and ſuppreſſion of others; the occaſional and haſty removals of records and public inſtruments from place to place, and the neglect of making regular tranſmiſſions and returns of them into their proper repoſitories, the contempt wherewith they have been treated, and the ſpoil, ravages, and pilferings which they have ſuffered in rebellious times; the ſupineneſs and negligence of ſome officers to whoſe care they have been confided; together with a multitude of unavoidable incidents occaſioned by the viciſſitude of public affairs; and above all, the want of proper and ſufficiently commodious room in the reſpective offices and places originally allotted for the reception of the public records, threw many of them into ſuch diſorder and confuſion as rendered them uſeleſs, and in great meaſure unknown, cauſed ſome to be laid by in diſregarded heaps, and diſperſed and left others, partly in private hands, partly in places not aſſigned for public records, and partly in offices to which they did not of right belong; ſo that to the great inconvenience of the public, a complete ſeries of any kind of our remaining records and muniments is hardly to be met with together in one and the ſame repoſitory. It is not certain at what times the records of the parliament and chancery, from the commencement of the reign of king Richard the Second, to the cloſe of that of king Henry the Sixth, were removed into the Tower, or in what condition they were at that time; but we are aſſured upon royal authority, that previous thereunto, they had received no inconſiderable injuries from their remaining in private houſes and places.

In the third year of king Edward the Sixth a great number of records were caſually diſcovered in an old empty houſe within the Tower, which by laying damp, and many of them being piled up againſt the walls, were much damaged and eaten with the lime.

No particular attention appears to have been paid to the preſervation and utility of the public records from the death of king Edward the Third until after the complete eſtabliſhment of the Reformation. But from that time the royal and parliamentary authorities have frequently been exerted as well jointly as ſeparately, for their preſervation; and for making their contents not only better known, but more ſerviceable and beneficial to the ſubject, by cauſing them to be ſorted, methodized, and digeſted in proper order; and the forming proper calendars and indices thereto.

It was not one of the leaſt glories of the reign of queen Elizabeth, and for which poſterity ſtand indebted to her, that the public records and muniments, which had long laid neglected, became the objects of her attention, and were reſcued from duſt and oblivion by the effects of her patronage. The watchful eye of that queen could not, without the greateſt regret, ſee the ruinous condition to which ſome of thoſe ineſtimable monuments had formerly been reduced, and the dangers to which others lay expoſed at the time of her acceſſion to the throne. Her conference with that able antiquary Mr. Lambard, on her appointing him keeper of the Tower records, and the ſtrong injunctions ſhe at that time gave him, would be convincing proofs, if we had not any other, of the high eſtimation in which ſhe always held thoſe valuable monuments of antiquity, and of her anxiety and endeavours throughout the preceding part of her reign, for their future preſervation and notoriety.

In the year 1567, being informed of the confuſed and perilous ſtate in which the records of the parliament and chancery then lay, ſhe gave ſtrict orders to the marquiſs of Wincheſter, then chancelıro of the exchequer and lord treaſurer of England, to cauſe rooms in the Tower of London fit to receive them, to be immediately prepared; and being ſoon after certified by him, that he had accordingly provided and made within the ſaid Tower, a moſt apt, ſure, and convenient place for the reception of thoſe records, ſhe iſſued her warrant, directed to Sir William Cordel, the maſter of the rolls, wherein after declaring, "that it was not meet "that the records of her chancery, which were accounted as a principal "member of the treaſure belonging to herſelf, and to her crown and "realm, ſhould remain in private houſes and places, for doubt of ſuch "danger or ſpoil, as theretofore had happened to the like records in the "time of king Richard the Second and king Henry the Sixth." She commanded him to deliver unto Mr. William Bowyer the keeper of the records within the Tower of London, "all the parliament rolls, patent "rolls, treaſurer's rolls, cloſe rolls, fine rolls, bundles of eſcheators, inquiſitions, attainders, and ſurrenders, and all other rolls and records whatſoever of her chancery, of and for the times and ſeveral reigns of king "Richard the Third, king Henry the Seventh, king Henry the Eighth, "and king Edward the Sixth." At the ſame time the lord treaſurer ſignified by letter to the maſter of the rolls, "that the houſes in the "Tower made perfect for the records, were large enough to take a great "quantity to be there well preſerved; and requeſted thoſe of the "chancery and parliament might be eſtreated to the Tower in order to "be ſorted and kept to the queen's honour, and the common weal of her "nobles and ſubjects by Mr. Bowyer, keeper of the records there;" a gentleman, who amongſt other teſtimonies that he had given of his conſummate knowlege in matters of record, had then lately written a journal of the tranſactions of parliament from the firſt year of king Henry the Eighth to the ſeventh of king Edward the Sixth; and who was the firſt perſon that reduced the Tower records into good order, and then digeſted and made repertories of them. In which work, conſiſting of ſix large volumes in folio now loſt, he ſpent eight years, and above one thouſand pounds of his own money.

After the receipt of ſo peremptory a warrant it might reaſonably be ſuppoſed that the commands of the queen had been forthwith carried into execution, but the contrary is certain, as all the above-mentioned records are ſtill in the cuſtody of the maſter of the rolls, and remain within the chapel of his houſe in Chancery-lane.

Further, the ſame queen being fully apprized of the great benefit which flowed to her ſubjects from the practice of inrollments, ſhe, for their better ſecurity and the furtherance of ſo important an uſage, by letters patent, dated in the ſixteenth year of her reign, incorporated the ſix clerks of the chancery, and the three clerks of the petty bag, clerks of the inrollments in the high court of chancery to inroll all recognizances, deeds, and other matters which ſhould be inrolled in that court, and directed that ſuch office ſhould be executed by two deputy clerks approved of and ſworn before the lord chancellor, or the lord keeper of the great ſeal for the time being, with power to him to examine and amend the abuſes of ſuch office; at the ſame time declaring, that if any failure ſhould happen therein, the corporation ſhould be reſponſible.

The care of this princeſs was not however confined to the records of the parliament and chancery, but extended to thoſe of the other courts. For we find, that ſhe directed Mr. Agard, one of the two deputies to Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, then chamberlain of the exchequer, to ſort and digeſt not only the records depoſited in the four treaſeries there, but alſo all the original leagues and treaties of peace, truce, alliance, and marriage between England and foreign nations, and to make calendars of them. The queen did not live long enough to ſee this great work finiſhed, but in the ſucceeding reign, Mr. Agard completed it in ſuch manner as plainly indicated his great accuracy and knowlege of records, and that the queen had not been miſtaken in the perſon ſhe choſe for that ſervice.

To the laſting honour of this illuſtrious queen it may likewiſe be added, that her attention was not confined to the records of the kingdom, ſtrictly conſidered as ſuch, but extended to the preſervation of all title deeds, and other muniments which tended to aſcertain, protect, and ſecure the landed property of her ſubjects. To this end ſhe intereſted herſelf for the recovery and delivery to the proper owners, of all ſuch diſperſed charters, deeds, books, and other writings as concerned ſuch of their eſtates as had thentofore belonged to religious houſes; and which charters and muniments at the time of the ſuppreſſion had been embezled and taken out of the archieves of the houſes to which they had appertained; and more eſpecially all thoſe, which according to the uſual practice of former ages, in the times of the civil wars, public tumults, and inſurrections, had been by the nobility and principal land-owners depoſited in monaſteries, in hopes that they might there find an aſylum, and eſcape that ſpoil and deſtruction to which their own caſtles and habitations were in ſuch times continually expoſed.

Laſtly, for the encouragement of her ſubjects to ſearch into and cultivate an acquaintance with the records of the kingdom, and to render the enquiry after them, and their contents eaſy and familiar, that excellent princeſs formed a ſociety for the ſtudy of Engliſh antiquities, compoſed of the ableſt lawyers and men of the beſt hiſtorical learning in her time, to whom ſhe earneſtly recommended the application of their ſtudies to the uſe and benefit of her people.

In the beginning of the reign of king James the Firſt great complaints were made of the difficulties, delays, and inconveniences that attended the making ſearches in the ſeveral public offices of record, and more particularly of the dangers and hazard to which the property of the ſubjects was continually liable, from the uncertainty of finding thoſe matters of record which were neceſſarily ſought after; and more eſpecially in reſpect to prejudicial incumbrances, notwithſtanding the proviſion made by the Statute 23 Hen. VIII. cap. 6, * for the entry of all ſtatutes, merchant, and of the ſtaple, in what was then ſtyled the ſtatute office. On this occaſion many petitions were preferred to the king, and ſeveral different plans formed for the redreſs of the miſchiefs complained of; all which petitions and plans were reſpectively referred, ſome, to the conſideration of the lord chancellor Elleſmere, and a committee of the judges; and others, to the lord chief juſtice of England, the chief juſtice of the common pleas, and the chief baron of the exchequer, who, after mature examination into the truth of the ſeveral allegations in thoſe ſeveral petitions, and of the propriety and feazability of the plans and methods propoſed, reported their opinions on each to the king.

Whilſt theſe matters were in agitation ſeveral of the ſuitors concerned in thoſe petitions had frequent conferences with each other, and having formed an intire new plan, framed upon more general and excluſive principles, they jointly laid the ſame before his majeſty, who having referred the ſame, together with the ſeveral former plans and reports, to the conſideration of Sir Francis Bacon, then lord keeper of the great ſeal, and ſeveral of the king's council, they certified to his majeſty as their opinions, that the eſtabliſhment of an office of general remembrance of matters of record would be beneficial to the commonwealth, and no way prejudicial to any of the record officers in their ſeveral offices and places of employment. In conſequence of this opinion the king by his letters patent, dated 9th October in the fifteenth year of his reign, reciting, "that the multiplicity of ſearches in the ſeveral courts of juſtice and "equity, and the offices belonging to the ſame and in other offices and "places within the realm of England, to find out ſuch charges and "incumbrances entered upon record or otherwiſe entered, regiſtered, or "kept in any courts whatſover, within the realm of England, or in any "other office or place whatſoever within the ſaid realm, as might any-"ways be prejudicial to purchaſers of lands, or unto creditors, or to ex-"ecutors or adminiſtrators of perſons deceaſed, for want of knowlege "thereof, or of ſuch diſcharges as had thereupon been duly had and "made; then was, and theretofore had been ſo manifold intricate, "chargeable, tedious, and uncertain, as that no purchaſer, without a "multitude of ſeveral ſearches in the ſaid ſeveral courts, offices, and "places, and without great charge and trouble, could be ſure or ſecured "from, or be able to know or find out, ſuch incumbrances whereby the "lands might be charged, or the due and legal diſcharges of the ſame, "if any ſuch had been; and that no executor or adminiſtrator could be "ſecure to ſtand freed from the payment out of his own eſtate, of "diverſe debts and duties due by the deceaſed, notwithſtanding ſuch "executors and adminiſtrators had formerly truly paid to the full and "true value of the perſonal eſtate of the teſtator, or inteſtate, for "want of knowlege of the ſuits and judgments for debts or damages "wherewith they were or might be charged by matter of record, "which by the law were and ought to have been by them firſt paid "and ſatisfied; whereby great damage, miſchief, and inconveniences "daily happened to diverſe perſons for want of ready, certain, and "ſpeedy means to diſcover or find out the ſame;" and alſo reciting, "that the king being minded to prevent ſuch miſchiefs, prejudices, and "troubles as might thereafter ariſe concerning the premiſes, and in-"tending to provide for the ſafety, ſecurity, and common good of his "ſubjects, by erecting and eſtabliſhing ſome certain office or place "whereto his ſubjects might reſort and be truly informed and aſcer-"tained, and thereby avoid the expence and trouble they then were "enforced to undergo for their ſecurity and ſatisfaction, by the multi-"tude and uncertainty of ſearches in the ſeveral courts and offices of "the realm;" granted, ordained, created, and appointed, that there ſhould be for ever thereafter an office which ſhould be called THE OFFICE OF GENERAL REMEMBRANCE OF MATTERS OF RECORD; and that the officer or officers to execute the ſame ſhould be called THE GENERAL

REMEMBRANCER or REMEMBRANCERS OF MATTERS OF RECORD, and have power and authority by him or themſelves, or by his or their ſufficient deputy or deputies, to enter and keep in books to be provided for that purpoſe, in form of an alphabetical table, remembrance or repertory, by the ſurnames of the parties; an abſtract or entry of all ſuch matters of record, &c. as thereafter ſhould be had or made in the courts of chancery, king's bench, common pleas, and exchequer, as alſo in the courts of marſhalſea and other inferior courts of record within the realm of England, and likewiſe of all wills and teſtaments which ſhould thenafter be produced or regiſtered in any eccleſiaſtical court of juriſdiction. For theſe purpoſes the patent provided, that the proper officers of thoſe ſeveral courts ſhould reſpectively, within a certain time therein limited, certify into the aforeſaid office of remembrance,

1. "All judgments which ſhould be given in the court of chancery, "king's bench, common pleas, or exchequer at Weſtminſter, with "the term, number, roll, ſums of money, and other matters recovered, "and the plaintiffs, defendants, and attornies names, and ſuch other "neceſſary circumſtances."

2. "All recognizances which ſhould be acknowleged to any ſubject "in any of thoſe courts, for any matter whatſoever, with the effect of "their ſeveral conditions and defeaſances upon record."

3. "Except recognizances which are or ſhould be acknowleged for "bail, which ſhould be only certified upon the ſuing forth of the firſt "writ of execution upon the judgment given or to be given in the "cauſe where the recognizance for bail was taken."

4. "All fines, common recoveries, indentures of bargain and ſale, "and all other deeds, aſſurances, and conveyances which ſhould be in"rolled, acknowleged, or entered upon record, in any court of record "whatſoever in England, or the dominions thereof."

5. "All judgments in the court of marſhalſea for the king's houſhold, "or court of the verge for his majeſty's houſhold, and all other infe"rior courts of record, as in London and other corporation courts, and "in all other courts of record whatſoever in England, or the dominions "thereof, when the debt or damages recovered ſhall amount to twenty "pounds or above, beſides coſts."

6. "All recognizances which ſhould be acknowleged to the king for "debt or payment of money, with the conditions and defeaſances "thereof."

7. "All deeds inrolled which ſhould be acknowleged to the king."

8. "All obligations which ſhould be acknowleged to the king, "having or which ſhould have the force of a ſtatute ſtaple, with the " condition or defeaſance thereof whereſoever within England or the " dominions thereof."

9. " All ſatisfactions and diſcharges of record by acknowledgment, " conſent of parties, return of execution made, cancellation, exonera- " tion, withdrawing, or order of court, &c. of any of the judgments, " recognizances, or obligations, before or thereafter therein mentioned."

10. " All Wills and Teſtaments wherein any Lands, Tenements, or " Hereditaments, or other Profits iſſuing thereout, were bequeathed or " mentioned."

11. " All other Wills and Teſtaments concerning goods only, where, " by the inventory exhibited, the goods ſhould appear to amount to " above forty pounds."

12. " All adminiſtrations of goods, and of any dying, or which " ſhould die inteſtate, where the goods appeared by the inventory to " exceed forty pounds." As alſo,

13. " All recognizances then acknowledged or thereafter to be ac- " knowledged, for any other matter than for debt or payment of money, " which recognizances ſhould be forfeited to the king, together with " the conditions and defeaſances thereof, time and cauſe of for- " feiture."

All theſe ſeveral matters and certificates were, by thoſe letters patents, directed to be entered and digeſted in ſuch office of general remembrance, which is thereby appointed to be always kept within the cities of London or Weſtminſter, or in Chancery Lane or Holborn, in the county of Middleſex, by a certain officer or officers who ſhould from time to time be conſtituted by letters patent under the great ſeal of England; and to which office of general remembrance, the alphabetical digeſting and entering in form of an alphabetical table, remembrance, or repoſitory, all the before-mentioned matters, ſhould thereafter only and particularly be united and annexed. Theſe letters patent were granted unto John Fermour, John Friend, and Henry Milles, eſquires, and to the longeſt liver of them; which patentees were further authorized to demand and take from ſuch perſon, as from time to time ſhould make ſearch in the ſaid office of general remembrance, for every one whole and intire ſearch, to be made for ſuch and ſo long time as the party ſearching ſhould deſire the ſame, the ſum of ſixteen pence, being, as the patent declares, the ſum which at that time uſed to be paid for and upon ſearches made for letters patent, or other matters remaining of record in the chapel of the rolls.

Sir Thomas Wilſon, nephew to Dr. Wilſon, ſecretary of ſtate, being on the 24th of June 1612, appointed keeper and regiſter of the papers of ſtate, an office that had been inſtituted by king Henry the Eighth towards the beginning of his reign, ſoon after received the poſitive commands of king James to reduce into the ſet form of a library all the ſtate papers then in his cuſtody; all which, until that time, had been kept locked up in boxes; and to place them in an apartment fitted up for their reception within the old Banquetting Houſe at Whitehall; and theſe orders were accordingly carried into execution with the utmoſt diſpatch.

At the cloſe of the year 1612 a fire happened in the office of the ſix clerks of the court of chancery, by which many bills, anſwers, and other pleadings, together with the depoſitions of witneſſes and decrees, as alſo divers patent rolls, warrants, and other records then remaining in that office, were intirely conſumed; this accident might have been productive of the moſt dreadful and injurious events to many of the ſuitors of that court, had not the king by the advice of his privy council, in order to adminiſter all poſſible means of relief to his ſubjects affected by that calamity, on the ſeventh day of January following iſſued a PROCLAMATION, declaring, " that any exemplification or authentique copy of ſuch bills, " anſwers, pleadings, and depoſitions, the records and originals whereof " were burnt, which ſhould be produced by any of the parties con- " cerned, ſhould at their requeſt be again written out, filed, and re- " corded. That in caſe no copies of any depoſitions were made, the " commiſſioners, in whoſe hands the original depoſitions remained, " ſhould certify the ſame again into the court of chancery, there to " remain of record; and where depoſitions taken in any undetermined " cauſe were burnt, and could not be renewed by the means before- " mentioned, the lord keeper ſhould give proper orders for the relief of " the party grieved, either by ordering a new examination of witneſſes, " or otherwiſe as he ſhould find fit. That where any decree or inrol- " ment thereof had been burnt, any exemplification of ſuch decree or " any writ de executione decreti ſhould be new written and inrolled. " That all inrolments of patents burnt, on the producing the origi- " nal patent, or any exemplification or conſtat thereof, and upon view " of the original bill or warrant under the ſignet or privy ſeal, and of the " books of inrolments remaining in the cuſtody of the clerk of the ha- " naper, ſhould be newly written, entered, and inrolled of record. That " the lord keeper or the maſter of the rolls ſhould quiet, ſettle, and re- " concile all ſuch ambiguities, doubts, and queſtions, as might ariſe " concerning the due execution of the matter contained in ſuch pro- " clamation; and that ſuch perſons only ſhould have the benefit of ſuch

" proclamation, who requeſted the ſame before the tenth day of July " then next enſuing."

The immenſe quantity of manuſcripts, which the aſſiduity of Sir Robert Cotton had collected together, in order to form his library, began to be much ſpoken of at the time king Charles the Firſt aſcended the throne, and the free acceſs thereto, wherewith he generouſly indulged every perſon of literature, ſoon diſcovered that ſeveral papers and other writings, ſuppoſed more properly to belong to the public, were then in his poſſeſſion. On information of this matter being given to the king, the then court of ſtar-chamber decreed, that ſome perſons of truſt and quality ſhould be appointed to ſearch and view what books, papers, and other writings of ſtate properly belonging to the crown, were remaining in Sir Robert's cuſtody; and accordingly the king, on the ſecond of October, in the ſixth year of his reign, appointed Henry earl of Mancheſter and others "to view and take an account in writing " of ſuch records, books, writings, and original papers of ſtate, properly " belonging to the crown, as did remain with Sir Robert, or with any " other perſon for him or his uſe, and directing them to lay ſuch account " before his majeſty, that further orders and directions might be given " therein". The like inquiries were made into other collections of manuſcripts: and an attention to the care of the public muniments ſeemed to be then gaining ground. But the troubles which diſtracted the kingdom in the following part of this reign, ſcarce allowed either opportunity or leiſure for carrying on thoſe public purſuits and improvements which are better adapted to times of peace and tranquillity; ſo that it is no wonder that we do not find any further particular attention paid to the regulation of the public records during that period: on the contrary they, together with many of our other national muniments, were not permitted to remain undiſturbed in their ancient repoſitories; no inconſiderable number of them, almoſt from the inſtant that the commons and their committees aſſumed the reins of government, being removed, carried about, and at length detained, ſome in private hands, and others in improper places. The long uſurpation which followed upon the king's death was equally unfavourable to them, many becoming ſufferers, eſpecially thoſe which more immediately related to affairs of ſtate, owing in great meaſure to the free acceſs which Bradſhaw, Thurloe, Milton, and other grandees of thoſe times had to them. The evils likely to ariſe from ſuch treatment, and detention of the records and papers of ſtate induced the houſe of lords, previous to the return of king Charles the Second, to give orders on the 22d day of May 1660 for ſecuring all ſuch records, papers, and other writings belonging to the public, as were then in the houſe of John Phelps, one of the regicides. As ſoon as the Reſtoration had taken place, and legal government was happily re-eſtabliſhed, the king and his miniſters applied themſelves with a becoming ardour to the reſcuing the public records and papers from the dangers and injuries to which they had long been expoſed, and for the reſtoring them to the ſeveral offices to which they reſpectively of right belonged. Undoubted intelligence having been received that divers books, treaties, papers, and records of ſtate, had, during the then late unhappy troubles, got into the hands of John Thurloe, John Bradſhaw, ſerjeant at law, Henry Scobell, and ſundry other perſons, his majeſty king Charles the Second by his warrant dated the 12th of February 1660, directed Mr. Thomas Raymond, the then keeper of the paper-office, to repair to thoſe parties, or to their executors or adminiſtrators, and receive from them all ſuch books, treaties, papers, and records of ſtate, as were then in either of their cuſtodies, and to depoſit them ſafely in the paper-office at Whitehall; further ordering Mr. Raymond, to report to the privy council the names of every perſon who ſhould refuſe to deliver ſuch books, &c. to him. Soon after, the ſeveral ſerjeants at arms, Colonel Hally, and others were commanded to bring in all ſuch records and papers of ſtate, &c. as they had in their hands. About the ſame time divers papers of the like kind were ſeized among Bradſhaw's goods, and elſewhere, and delivered to the lord Gerrard of Brandon for his majeſty's ſervice. For the like purpoſes numerous and repeated orders were afterwards iſſued, and yet ſome of theſe orders were not attended with that ſucceſs which was expected and moſt zealouſly ſought for.

In the year 1661 the care of the Tower records was confided to that induſtrious antiquary Mr. William Prynne, who, in obedience to the royal mandate, not only ſaved and brought to light from oblivion and confuſion, great numbers of ancient and valuable parliamentary and other records, which, as he informs us, [*] through negligence, neſcience, and ſloathfulneſs had for many years then paſt layen buried together in one confuſed chaos under corroding putrifying cobwebbs, duſt, and filth, in the darkeſt corners of Cæſar's chapel, in the White Tower; but afterwards ſorted, marſhalled, and arranged them in ſuch method, that by the aſſiſtance of the tables and calendars which he made, any perſon might have eaſy recourſe to any of thoſe records.

The ſame king, in the nineteenth year of his reign, having cauſed an enquiry to be made into the ſtate of the records of the court of common pleas found that the plea rolls of that court began to periſh for want of convenient room in the treaſury where they lay; and not having calendars made unto them, were uſeleſs to his ſubjects: whereupon he iſſued a warrant directed to Sir Orlando Bridgeman, then keeper of the great ſeal, authorizing him to ſeal a precept, directed to the lord chief juſtice of the common pleas, for the ſpeedy delivery of all the plea rolls from the end of the reign of king Richard the Second, until the beginning of the reign of king Edward the ſixth, that were then in his cuſtody, unto the treaſurer and chamberlains of the exchequer, to be by them kept, and fitted with proper calendars, in like manner as the reſt of the rolls of that kind until the end of the reign of king Edward the ſecond then were; and a tranſmiſſion was accordingly made, as is teſtified by an indenture of the firſt day of Auguſt 1670.

[*] Preface to Brevia Parliamentaria rediviva, part 3.

It being repreſented to his majeſty in the following year, that the bundles of bills, anſwers, depoſitions, and other pleadings of the court of chancery, for want of convenient room in the office of the ſix clerks to keep them in, were in danger of receiving prejudice; and that there was not any room for them in the chapel of the rolls; Sir Algernon May, then clerk of the records of the court of chancery within the Tower of London, was, purſuant to his majeſty's command, authorized by the warrant of Sir Harbottle Grimſtoue, then maſter of the rolls, to receive from the ſix clerks all ſuch bundles of bills, &c. with the filing books belonging thereunto, until the firſt year of the then king, and the ſame were accordingly removed into the Tower, and the receipt of them was acknowledged by the clerk to the keeper of the records there, on the 18th of October 1671.

In the year 1687, on complaint being made to the lords of the treaſury, that the records, books, and papers belonging to the then late court of wards and liveries lay neglected, and in a ſtate of decay, their lordſhips gave directions for their being forthwith ſorted and put in proper order by Mr. Grimes, under whoſe care they were then placed for that purpoſe.

Soon after king William's and queen Mary's acceſſion to the throne, Mr. Harley, afterwards earl of Oxford, formed a plan for printing, at the public expence, all the leagues, treaties, alliances, capitulations, and confederacies, which had at any time been made between the crown of England, and other kingdoms, princes, and ſtates; intermixed with ſuch inſtruments and papers of ſtate, as either more immediately related to them, or were curious and uſeful in illuſtrating the Engliſh hiſtory; and having communicated his deſign to the earl of Hallifax, that great patron of literature and aſſiduous promoter of the ſtudy of Engliſh antiquities, laid the ſame before the queen; the king being then with the army in Flanders, and ſhe was pleaſed to approve thereof. Hereupon Mr. Rymer, Rymer, the hiſtoriographer royal, was pitched upon as the proper perſon to carry that deſign into execution, and he being accordingly enjoined to prepare the work for the preſs, he on the 26th of Auguſt 1693 received her majeſty's warrant, granting him, "free liberty and acceſs from time to "time to ſearch into the records in the Tower of London, in the rolls, "in the augmentation office, the exchequer, the journals of both houſes "of parliament, and all other places where records were kept; as alſo "the royal library at St. James's, and the paper-office, and to make "tranſcripts of all ſuch as he ſhould think proper for publication." On the 12th of April following, he likewiſe obtained a warrant from king William, authorizing the lord keeper of the great ſeal of England to cauſe a writ to be ſealed and directed to the lords of the treaſury, and the chamberlains of the exchequer, enabling and requiring them to deliver to him from time to time, "all ſuch leagues, treaties, alliances, "capitulations, and confederacies, with all other records relating there-"unto, remaining in the ſeveral treaſuries of the exchequer, which he "ſhould have occaſion of or deſire:" and ſuch writ was accordingly ſoon after iſſued. In the year 1696 on Mr. Rymer's application to the proper officers, in conſequence of this writ, it was diſcovered, that the leagues, treaties of peace, &c. which had been methodized, and of which calendars had been made by Mr. Arthur Agard, in the reigns of Elizabeth and James the Firſt, were placed in a vault in the cloiſters of Weſtminſter Abbey, where they were very ill lodged; whereupon the then lords of the treaſury gave immediate orders for their being removed into the chapter-houſe of the church of Weſtminſter, for their better accommodation and preſervation.

On the 10th of December 1703 the houſe of lords appointed a committee to inſpect the method of keeping records in offices, and how they were kept, and to conſider of ways to remedy what ſhould be found amiſs, with power to ſend for ſuch officers, and hear ſuch perſons thereupon, as they ſhould think fit; being afterwards to make their report to the houſe. This committee was yearly renewed in ſeveral following ſeſſions of parliament, and from time to time reported the progreſs made by them in execution of that truſt.

In the year 1704, it appearing that the Rotuli Normanniæ, Franciæ, Vaſconiæ, Walliæ, Romæ, Scotiæ, Almaniæ, et Hiberniæ, together with others rolls from the firſt year of king John, to the end of the reign of king Edward the Fourth, had no calendars or abſtracts made of them; and that a multitude of records in ſeveral reigns, ſome relating to proceedings in the courts of juſtice, and others to ſtate matters, lay in confuſed heaps within the Tower of London, and were in danger of periſhing; the houſe of lords directed the lord treaſurer Godolphin to repreſent thoſe matters to the queen, and to requeſt her majeſty to give directions therein. Whereupon the neceſſary orders were iſſued to the board of works for fitting up proper rooms, and providing preſſes, ſhelves, and drawers for reception of the records in Cæſar's Chapel, and the ſorting, methodizing, and digeſting of thoſe records, was confided to the care of William Petyt, eſquire, under whoſe inſpection, and by the aſſiſtance of his chief clerk George Holmes, eſquire, that work proceeded with great vigour, judgment, and diſpatch.

In the ſame year Mr. Rymer, in obedience to the royal commands which he had received in the late reigns and in conſequence of the ſubſequent protection and encouragement afforded to him by queen Anne, publiſhed the firſt volume of that noble work, which he intitled, FOEDERA CONVENTIONES, LITERÆ, et Cujuſcunque Generis ACTA PUBLICA INTER REGES ANGLIÆ, ET ALIOS quoſvis IMPERATORES, REGES, PONTIFICES, PRINCIPES, VEL COMMUNITATES, ab Ineunto SÆCULO DUODECIMO, viz. ab Anno 1101 ad noſtra uſque Tempora habita aut tractata. Ex Autographis, infra Secretiores ARCHIVORUM REGIORUM Theſaurarias, per multa ſæcula reconditis, fideliter exſcripta. The public had formed high ideas of this propoſed collection of records, long before its publication; but their expectations were greatly diſappointed when they ſaw it. They could not, without injuſtice to Mr. Rymer, neglect applauding his labours, but at the ſame time very properly regretted his want of correctneſs; and that he had not more maturely conſidered the merits as well of ſeveral of thoſe inſtruments which he printed, as of many others which he omitted.

The ſtate of the paper office over the great gate-way adjoining to the Tilt-yard, Whitehall, and that of the Chapter-Houſe in Weſtminſter Abbey, the latter of which was the chief repoſitory for the records of the treaſuries of the exchequer, having been the objects of inquiry during the following winter, the houſe of lords on the 4th of March 1705, agreed upon an addreſs to the queen, requeſting her to give ſuch orders as ſhe ſhould think fit, for the recovery of ſuch papers of ſtate as were not delivered into the office; for the directing ſome proper method to be taken in future, in order to preſerve the ſtate papers for the uſe of the public; and for putting the chapter-houſe into thorough repair. From this time great improvements were made in fitting up the record office in the Tower of London, and in ſorting and digeſting the ſeveral records there; inſomuch that in the begining of the year 1709 the houſe of lords were informed by their commitee, that the confuſed heap of records of divers natures, which before lay covered with duſt, was then thoroughly cleanſed in order to be ſorted; that all the rolls from the firſt year of king John to the laſt of Edward the Fourth were placed under their proper years; and that a catalogue was made of the Norman, Scotch, Welſh, and Iriſh rolls; that alphabetical liſts of the names of perſons and places mentioned in them were drawn up; and that the depoſitions in the court of chancery of the reigns of queen Elizabeth, and of the kings James and Charles the Firſt, were bundled up alphabetically, and entries made of the names of the parties.

The records of the Court of Wards and Liveries, notwithſtanding the orders given by the lords of the treaſury in the year 1687, ſtill continuing in their original repoſitory within the fiſh-yard adjoining to Weſtminſter Hall, were in the year 1709 found to be in a periſhing condition; great numbers of the books and papers lying on the floor in the greateſt confuſion and diſorder; and the building itſelf very ruinous. Grimes, to whoſe care the digeſting of thoſe records had been intruſted, was then dead, and had proceeded no further in the buſineſs aſſigned to him, than drawing up a ſhort repertory of them, and the making four alphabetical Indices to the tranſcripts of the Inquiſitiones poſt mortem, to which, upon any occaſional ſearch, his ſon had acceſs; but the key of the office was left in the cuſtody of the king's fiſhmonger or yeoman of the ſalt ſtores, whoſe apartments adjoined thereto, and who being ignorant of the value of thoſe records, permitted any perſon to go in and rummage them at pleaſure. Upon this ſtate of facts and a well-founded apprehention that many of the records and the books of entries had been imbezzled, thoſe which remained were ordered to be removed for the preſent into ſome rooms belonging to the uſher of the black rod near the prince's chamber, adjoining to the houſe of lords. At ſame time the two offices or treaſuries near Weſtminſter Hall, wherein the records of the court of King's Bench were kept, being inſpected by the lords committees, were found to be very improper for the purpoſe to which they had been allotted; the one being ſituate over a waſh-houſe and ſtables, and the other being low, damp, and ſo noiſome, that the officers complained that they were not able to ſit in it, and that it rotted the records. On this ſtate of theſe records, and on a repreſentation then made to the lords committees by the Earl of Bindon, then Earl Marſhal, for the records of the court of wards and liveries being depoſited in the college of arms, founded upon a ſuggeſtion that thoſe records might be of uſe for making out the deſcents and pedigrees of the nobility; the lords reſolved, that an inquiry ſhould be made into the titles of the perſons poſſeſſed of the houſes and rooms adjoining to Weſtminſter Hall, and the offices of the courts of juſtice; that the records and books belonging to the court of wards and liveries might be of uſe for making out the deſcents and pedigrees of the nobility; and that the queen ſhould be deſired to give ſuch orders therein as ſhe ſhould think fit. And theſe reſolutions were accordingly laid before the queen by the lord chancellor. Whether any ſteps were taken in conſequence, is not certain; but it is moſt probable that no orders were given for the before-mentioned purpoſes, ſince the lords committees, in their report of the 31ſt of May 1711, reminded the houſe of the propoſal which had been offered by the earl marſhal, in regard to the records of the court of wards and liveries, and of the reſolutions of the houſe thereupon; as alſo of the inquiry recommended to be made into the titles of the poſſeſſors of houſes or rooms adjoining to Weſtminſter Hall; and that when the report was laid before the queen, ſhe in anſwer was pleaſed to ſay, "that ſhe would give the neceſſary "orders in relation to the matters contained therein."

The reſolutions in regard to the removal of the records being favourable to the views of the college of arms, an application was made to the lord high treaſurer, by Mr. Anſtis, that the records of the court of wards and liveries, and thoſe of the court of requeſts, might be put under his care, and annexed to the office of garter king at arms, to which he had then lately been nominated. But no anſwer appears to have been given to this application.

In Auguſt 1712, the chancery records, in the cuſtody of the ſix clerks, having become exceeding numerous; and there being little ſpace left in their record rooms for the reception of thoſe which daily came in, Sir John Trevor, then maſter of the rolls, iſſued his warrant to the ſix clerks, for the tranſmiſſion to the Tower of all the records in their cuſtody, to the firſt year of king James the Second, conſiſting of 2200 bundles, and at the ſame time directed another to Mr. Topham, clerk of the records in the Tower, for their reception into the record office there; but on the ſix clerks attending Mr. Topham on that occaſion, they were informed by him "that there was not room ſufficient to receive the ſaid records in the "places already allotted at the Tower for that purpoſe."

About this time great inquiries were made and examinations had in regard to the ſeveral lands and revenues then late in jointure to Catherine, queen dowager; but the books, accounts, ſurveys, and writings belonging thereto, having been long thrown by and neglected, were found in ſuch diſorder and confuſion, as to be in great meaſure uſeleſs, till ſome better arrangement of them was made. Whereupon the earl of Oxford, lord high treaſurer, on the 23d of December 1713, appointed Thomas Madox, eſquire, and Mr. William Soley, to methodize and digeſt thoſe papers, &c. No further proceedings appear to have been had in regard to the public records and muniments, from this time, until after the death of queen Anne.

Soon after the acceſſion of king George the Firſt, the ſix clerks renewed their ſollicitations for the removal of the records of the court of chancery into the Tower, but without effect; by reaſon of a claim made by the board of ordnance, to the room in the Tower then newly pitched upon as proper for the reception of thoſe records.

In Auguſt, 1717 upon pulling down the houſe of the maſter of the rolls, there were found in a room adjoining to the chapel great numbers of bills, anſwers, depoſitions, and proceedings in chancery, together with ſundry other public papers, books, and parchments, of the time of queen Elizabeth, and the ſubſequent reigns, down to the Reſtoration, lying in heaps, and in the greateſt confuſion; all which, by the directions of Sir Joſeph Jekyl, the then maſter of the rolls, were cleared from the duſt and filth wherewith they were covered, and put into proper bundles.

The diſpute between the ſix clerks and the officers of the board of ordnance ſtill ſubſiſting, the then lord chancellor Macclesfield applied, on that occaſion, to the lords in parliament; whereupon the committee, formerly appointed to inſpect the records, was revived on the 9th of December 1718, and inſtructed to view the records of the court of chancery in the Tower, and thoſe fit to be carried thither, alſo to conſider what place there then was proper to receive them, and likewiſe to view all ſuch other records as they ſhould think fit. In conſequence of theſe inſtructions, the lords committees directed Mr. Madox and the proper officers to lay before them the ſtate of the records in the ſeveral treaſuries belonging to the upper exchequer; in the office of the auditors of the land revenue; in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter; and in the Tower of London; and having ordered twenty-one bags full of other very valuable records, which at the time of the fire that happened at Whitehall in the reign of king James the Firſt, were brought away and hung up in the pell-office in the exchequer, although no way belonging to that office, or to the revenue, to be ſealed up, marked, and delivered into the cuſtody of their houſe-keeper, they on the 16th April 1719 made their report to the houſe of lords, giving therein an account of the ſeveral ſpecies of records in the court of the receipt of the exchequer; ſtating the reports made by the reſpective record officers who had the cuſtody of thoſe records; as likewiſe a memorial preſented by Mr. Anſtis, garter king of arms, requeſting that the keeping of the records of the court of wards and liveries might be annexed to the office of garter king at arms; and alſo acquainting the houſe, that the lords committees had directed that ſeveral volumes of tranſcripts of records left by Mr. Rymer at his death in the hands of Awnſham Churchill, a bookſeller, ſhould for the preſent be put into the hands of the houſe-keeper of the houſe of lords. At the ſame time the lords committees having viewed the building called the White Tower within the Tower of London, reported, as their opinion, that, " A large room within that Tower, adjoining to the preſent record " rooms, ſhould be allotted for reception of the records then in the cuſtody " of the ſix clerks of the court of chancery;" and an addreſs was preſented to his late majeſty, deſiring ſuch directions might be given upon thoſe matters as his majeſty ſhould think proper. No directions being however iſſued, the ſix clerks in February 1722 applied to the lords of the treaſury for the grant of that room, but the board of ordnance perſiſting in the impoſſibility of their being able to quit it without further proviſions being made for their ſtores, no further ſteps were taken towards the removal of thoſe records, when the ſix clerks made their report to the committee appointed to view the Cottonian Library in the year 1732.

Soon after the commencement of the next ſeſſions of parliament, a committee of lords was again appointed to inſpect the parliament office, as alſo the records and public papers; and on the third of July 1724 John Lawton, eſquire, with neceſſary aſſiſtants, was appointed to ſort and digeſt the numerous records depoſited in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, which till that time had continued in the utmoſt diſorder.

In conſequence of the reports made by the lords committees on the 1ſt and 22d of May 1725, and of their addreſſes preſented to his majeſty, directions were given for making ſuch conveniencies and repairs, as might be neceſſary for the more ſafe depoſiting and keeping the records in the parliament office and king's houſe adjoining; for the uſher of the black rod's delivering to Mr. Lawton, then lately employed to ſort and digeſt the records in the chapter-houſe, all ſuch records as were then in his cuſtody, and lying in great diſorder and danger of being deſtroyed, in certain rooms adjoining to the houſe of lords; and for preparing conveniencies in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter for the reception of ſuch records as were then depoſited therein, and ſuch others as might thereafter be tranſmitted thither.

The lords committees having made a further report on the 25th day of May 1728, in which it was repreſented, that the records of the court of wards and liveries, lying in rooms adjoining to the houſe of lords, and a vaſt number of exchequer records eſteemed of great value, lying over the gateway leading from St. Margaret's lane into the New Palace-yard, but which were in a periſhing condition; together with a room full of king's bench and common pleas proceedings, then lying over the houſe of commons in duſt and rubbiſh, might be removed to the chapter- houſe, which was then made a common repoſitory for records; as alſo, that Awnſham Churchill, not having delivered up the MSS. volumes of tranſcripts of records made by Mr. Rymer into the hands of the houſe-keeper of the houſe or lords, as he had been directed to do, and being then dead, thoſe tranſcripts remained in the hands of his executors, and that therefore ſome effectual orders ſhould be taken for the delivery of them; it was ordered by their lordſhips, that the records and papers relating to the court of wards and liveries, as alſo thoſe lying over the gateway leading into the New Palace-yard, together with a room full of king's bench and common pleas proceedings, then lying over the houſe of commons, ſhould be forthwith removed to the chapter-houſe; and that Mr. Rymer's MSS. volumes of records ſhould be forthwith delivered to the keeper of the records in the chapter-houſe, for their ſafe cuſtody and public uſe *.

Part of the manuſcripts in the Cottonian Library being burnt, and others greatly damaged by a fire which happened at Aſhburnham houſe in Little Dean's Yard, Weſtminſter, in the year 1731, the houſe of commons appointed a committee to view that library, as alſo ſuch of the public records of the kingdom as they ſhould think fit; directing them, to report to the houſe, "the condition thereof, together with what they "ſhould judge fit to be done for the better reception, preſervation, and "more convenient uſe of the ſame." In compliance with theſe inſtructions, that committee not only viſited the ſeveral public repoſitories and offices of record, but directed the reſpective keepers to lay before them an account in writing of the nature of the records in their cuſtody, of the ſtate in which they then were, and of what was neceſſary to be done, to put the ſame into a more proper condition, and make them more uſeful to the public; and having conſidered the ſeveral accounts preſented to them by the reſpective record keepers, on the 9th of May 1732 reported their proceedings and opinions to the houſe of commons, who immediately reſolved on an addreſs to his majeſty, whereby, after having ſtated the ruinous and dangerous condition of ſome of the public records, and the too narrow and confined apartments aſſigned for the reception of others; the prejudices ariſing from ſome of the records not being de-depoſited in their offices, but either remaining in private hands, or in places not aſſigned for public records, nor under the care of any ſtated officer; and the great inconveniencies which have ariſen to the inquirers after ſuch uſeful knowlege, not only from thoſe difficulties, but alſo from the undiſtinguiſhing manner in which ſome of the national records had been kept; humbly beeſought his majeſty to give ſuch directions as he ſhould think fit, for the better reception and more convenient uſe of the public records of the kingdom; at the ſame time aſſuring his majeſty, that whatever extraordinary expences ſhould be incurred by the directions to be given by him on that occaſion, ſhould with great cheerfulneſs be provided for and made good by them.

* Theſe MSS. volumes are now in the Britiſh Muſeum.

The zeal wherewith thoſe enquiries had been purſued, and the ſentiments of the houſe as expreſſed in their addreſs, favoured the wiſhes long entertained by the public, that ſome more effectual methods than were at that time obſerved, might be adopted by the legiſlature for making the contents of our national records and muniments generally known, and the ſearches into them certain, eaſy, and expeditious. To this end ſome propoſitions had then lately been made, which met with the approbation of thoſe who were thought to be competent judges in ſuch matters. The collecting together and removal of records from offices and places where they were improperly lodged, into repoſitories belonging to the offices where they were originally formed, and to which they of right belong, and the giving public notice from time to time of ſuch alteration of cuſtody, was conſidered as a material and adviſable ſtep to be taken towards forwarding the deſired purpoſes; which it was conceived might be ſtill further effected, by the forming and publication either of perfect calendars or complete indices to ſuch ſpecies of our records as might be deemed moſt materially uſeful to the public: whereby tedious and precarious ſearches would in great meaſure be prevented, and many curious and intereſting remains of antiquity, long neglected and unknown, might in all probability be brought to light.

Theſe particular deſiderata in record learning have not hitherto been ſupplied; but in other reſpects relative to records, the indulgence and beneficence of the crown, and both houſes of parliament, and their attention to the records, have of late been extended much further, and conferred on the public in ſo peculiar a manner, as muſt always be remembered and acknowleged with gratitude.

In 1742 the houſe of commons reſolved, that all the journals of that houſe, commencing with the book called Seymour, which begins with the reign of king Edward the Sixth, and is the firſt of thoſe journals now extant, ſhould be printed; and in conſequence of ſuch reſolution many volumes of that uſeful and truly valuable work are in the hands of the public.

In November 1755, twenty-two bags of records, papers, and other Writings belonging to his majeſty, being found concealed in the houſe of the then late John Anſtis, eſquire, garter king at arms, at Mortlake in Surrey, were ſeized and brought from thence, as being the property of the crown.

The printing all the rolls of parliament now extant, and the journals of the houſe lords, purſuant to their lordſhips order of the 9th of March 1767, the directions given for publiſhing that moſt ancient and ineſtimable record DOMESDAY, and the appointments and proviſions made by his preſent majeſty for the regulating, methodizing, and digeſting the public records and muniments, and for making proper calendars and indices thereto, whilſt they reflect a laſting honour on the promoters of thoſe laudable and beneficial deſigns, will diſtinguiſh the preſent reign and render his majeſty's name and memory admired, beloved, and revered to lateſt poſterity.

Such printed aſſiſtances as our inquiries after the contents of the public records have received from the labours of private perſons are but few, and thoſe ſlight and no ways ſatisfactory. Thomas Powell's repertory of records in the exchequer, and directions for ſearch of thoſe that are there; as likewiſe, in the Chancery and Tower, with the accuſtomed fees for ſuch inquiries, firſt publiſhed in 1622, and afterwards, ſomewhat more inlarged, in the year 1631, quarto, is no more than a very general ſtate of thoſe records, and upon the whole but an indifferent and unedifying performance. Fabian Phillip's Liſt of the Publick Records of the Kingdom, and Sir Julius Cæſar's Account of the Records of the Court of Requeſts, are of the ſame ſtamp. The account of the contents of our ſeveral offices of record, as given by Biſhop Nicolſon in the third part of his Engliſh Hiſtorical Library, is ſo general, that it rather raiſes our expectations than guides us in our ſearches. The general Table of Records of the Kingdom drawn up by Mr. Lawton under four different heads, viz. The Records of the Court of Chancery, of the Common Law, of the Exchequer, and of the Duchy Court of Lancaſter, printed in the report from the Committee appointed to view the Cottonian Library, &c. is a better directory, ſo far as relates to the general ſtate of the records of thoſe courts and the places where they are depoſited. But far more copious and ſcientific, and of much greater uſe, is the Index to the records, with directions to the ſeveral places where they are to be found, printed in octavo 1739.

In 1742 Mr. Thomas Carte publiſhed in two volumes in folio a calendar of the Vaſcon, Norman, and French rolls remaining in the Tower of London, under the title of Catalogue des ROLLS GASCONS, NORMANS, et FRANÇOIS, conſerves dans les archives de la TOUR DE LONDRES, tiré d'apres celui du garde des dites archives; et contenant le precis et ſommaire de tous les titres qui s'y trouvent concernant la GUIENNE, la NORMANDIE, et les autres provinces de la FRANCE ſujettes autrefois aux ROIS D'ANGLETERRE.

The favourable reception thoſe volumes met with both at home and abroad upon their firſt appearance, and the eſteem in which they have ever ſince been held, are no ſmall proofs of the utility of works of that ſort, and induces a preſumption that a ſimilar attempt in reſpect to ſome other of our public records, of much greater and more general uſe, and which was drawn up by the ſame able hand that formed thoſe calendars publiſhed by Mr. Carte, will not be thought altogether unworthy of the preſs.

The editor of the following ſheets, therefore, with great ſubmiſſion, now lays before the public ſeparate CALENDARS of the ANCIENT CHARTERS, PAPAL BULLS AND LETTERS, and thoſe of the WELCH and SCOTCH ROLLS remaining in the Tower of London; which CALENDARS he flatters himſelf will not prove unacceptable; more eſpecially as moſt of the records mentioned in them relate to affairs which, at the time of their being tranſacted, drew the attention of all Europe, and have ever ſince been conſidered as highly intereſting and important to this kingdom; and as all of them tend to illuſtrate different parts of our Engliſh hiſtory and antiquities, which for want of ſuch aſſiſtants have not hitherto been ſo clearly and perfectly underſtood as they ought to be.

That the accuracy of theſe CALENDARS are ſafely to be relied on, will not remain a doubt, when the reader is informed that they are carefully printed from the originals formerly belonging to and in the handwriting of that able and experienced record officer Mr. James Stewart, who was well known to have been long converſant with the Tower records, and which CALENDARS were communicated to the editor by his learned friend Dr. William Hunter, F. R. S. F. S. A. and one of the phyſicians in ordinary to her majeſty, into whoſe hands they fell after the death of the before-mentioned gentleman.

To theſe are ſubjoined, as not being improper attendants on the former part of this work, a CALENDAR compiled by Mr. Arthur Agarde, one of the deputy chamberlains of the exchequer in the reigns of queen Elizabeth and king James the Firſt, of all the treaties of peace, truce, &c. concluded between the kings of England and Scotland, and of the ſeveral inſtruments, letters, and papers of ſtate, relating to the laſt-mentioned kingdom, from the reign of king Richard the Firſt to the year 1586, now remaining in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter; a CATALOGUE of the muniments which were taken from the royal treaſury at Edinburgh, and carried to and depoſited at Berwick upon Tweed, by order of king Edward the Firſt, on the 23*d day of* Auguſt, in the 20*th year of his reign*; and a CATALOGUE of the Scottiſh muniments and writings, that were delivered by John de Drokensford, clerk of the king's wardrobe, to the treaſurer, and chamberlains of the exchequer at Weſtminſter, on the 16*th day of* January 1292, printed from tranſcripts made by Mr. Agarde; likewiſe two curious original CHARTERS, one of Richard the Firſt, king of England, and the other, of William ſurnamed The Lyon, king of Scotland; the PROCEEDINGS relating to the carrying back into Scotland ſeveral of the Scottiſh records; the PROCEEDINGS of the Parliament of Scotland from the 8*th of March* 1650; and ſome MEMORANDA relating to the affairs of Ireland.

Although the records uſually called The CHARTÆ ANTIQUÆ make no inconſiderable part of the Supellex Literariæ of the record office in the Tower of London, yet their contents have not hithero been ſufficiently inveſtigated and made known. In fact they are of ſo miſcellaneous and comprehenſive a nature, that without cultivating a more particular acquaintance with them, than, generally ſpeaking, hath been made with the other ſpecies of our records, it is impoſſible to conceive a juſt idea of that extenſive variety of important matters to which thoſe venerable remains of antiquity relate, and of the many rare materials, not to be drawn from any other fund of intelligence, which they furniſh, not only for illuſtrating the civil and eccleſiaſtical as well as the local hiſtory of the kingdom, but for evincing and aſcertaining the legal rights and property of individuals; ſo that a calendar of them becomes a neceſſary part of our libraries.

The CALENDAR of the papal bulls and letters, which immediately follows that of the Chartæ Antiquæ, will not be found leſs uſeful. For although it may perhaps be imagined that the ſeveral writers who have employed their labours in developing and detecting the papal uſurpations in this kingdom, and particularly Mr. Prynne, have ranſacked all the inſtruments mentioned in the calendars, yet, on examination, they will be found to contain many material circumſtances which did not fall within the cognizance of any of thoſe writers.

The affairs to which moſt of the records mentioned in the ſubſequent calendars relate, are ſtill more intereſting; and explain the hiſtory of times which were not only buſy and active, but make a very conſiderable figure in the Engliſh annals.

Notwithſtanding the connection which from very early times ſubſiſted between England and Scotland, and the diſputes and wars carried on between the two nations in reſpect to the ſeveral claims and rights demanded by each, no authentic inſtrument or record relative thereto, of an earlier date than the reign of king Richard the Firſt, is now to be met with; there is indeed in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter an inſtrument ſaid to be that of the homage made by Malcolm king of Scotland to king Edward the Confeſſor, but this on firſt ſight appears to be ſpurious; and, by whomſoever it may have been fabricated, is evidently written in a hand not older than the reign of king Edward the Third.

In the year 1174 William king of Scotland being taken priſoner by the Engliſh forces near Alnwick, was confined in the caſtle of Richmond; but king Henry the Second ſoon after finding himſelf neceſſitated to go into Normandy, carried over with him this Scottiſh king, together with many other conſiderable captives. On the 8th of December following the two kings being at Falaiſe; a convention was agreed upon between them. For the due performance of the conditions of this convention on the part of the king of Scotland, the caſtles of Berwick, Roxburgh, Jedburgh, Edenburgh, and Sterling, were to be put into the hands of king Henry; and William, having given hoſtages, ſworn fealty, and done homage to him, was ſet at Liberty.

In the year 1175 the two kings by appointment met at York, William being attended by all the biſhops abbots, earls, barons, knights, and freeholders holding immediately of his crown, from the greateſt to the loweſt in his kingdom, in order to do homage and ſwear fealty with him to the king of England and his ſucceſſors for ever; and on the 18th of Auguſt all the parties aſſembled in the cathedral church, when the convention of Falaiſe being read to them, it received their approbation, and was ratified by William and his brother David, both of whom put their hands and ſeals to the inſtrument, ſwore fealty and did homage to king Henry, as did alſo the Scottiſh earls, barons, and all the reſt of the attendants on William. In this ſtate all matters between the two kingdoms continued during the remainder of king Henry's reign.

King Richard the Firſt, a few months after his coming to the crown, determined on an expedition to the Holy Land, and for that purpoſe ſetting out to embark at Dover, was met at Canterbury by king William of Scotland and his brother David; William took this opportunity, when Richard was ſtriving to amaſs as much money as he could, towards defraying the expences of his expedition, to prevail with him for 10,000 marks ſterling to reſtore the caſtles of Berwick and Roxburgh, to releaſe William of all the engagements he had entered into with the late king when he was freed from his captivity, to deliver up the inſtruments containing the profeſſions of allegiance made by the barons of Scotland, and to receive William's homage on the ſame footing it had been made by his predeceſſor Malcolm; and that ſuch of thoſe inſtruments as might not happen to be given up, ſhould be deemed null and void.

It is at this period that the treaties, conventions, and other inſtruments relating to the kingdom of Scotland, now preſerved in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, may properly be ſaid to commence. The firſt inſtrument mentioned in the calendar, excepting the ſuppoſititious homage paid by Malcolm to king Edward the Confeſſor, already taken notice of, being a letter of king Richard the Firſt dated the 5th of December in the firſt year of his reign, concerning the reddition of the caſtles of Roxburgh and Berwick, the reſtitution of all liberties which kings of Scotland enjoyed before the captivity of king William, and the reſtoring all ſuch letters touching thoſe matters as were then known to be extant; as alſo declaring that ſuch as might thereafter be diſcovered ſhould be entirely invalid. The titles of all the other ſubſequent inſtruments mentioned in this calendar are entered in chronological order, and continued down to the treaty between queen Elizabeth and king James, dated the 5th of July 1586, with which the calendar cloſes.

The intire conqueſt of the principality of Wales, the annexing it to the crown of England, and the reduction of Scotland, were not the leaſt glories that king Edward the Firſt acquired by the wiſdom of his councils, the prudence of his meaſures, the vigour of his adminiſtration, and the valour of his arms. Lewellin ap Gruffydh, prince of North Wales, had highly offended king Edward on many occaſions; as by neglecting to attend at his coronation, and to do the homage of a vaſſal; by making a contract of marriage with Eleanor de Bohun, daughter of the then earl of Leiceſter; by his repeated diſobedience to the many ſummons ſent him to do his homage; and more particularly by the inſolent demands he made on the king, and the depredations he had committed in the Welch marches. The king, therefore, irritated by theſe repeated acts of perfidy and inſolence, when ſitting in his council, and attended by the judges, and a great number of his biſhops, earls, and barons, on the 12th of November 1276, ſolemnly pronounced Lewellin guilty of contumacy and breach of the peace between him and the then late king Henry the Third; and it was reſolved to proceed againſt him as an open rebel, and to reduce him by force of arms.

The meaſures taken for this purpoſe, and the army at the head of which the king entered Wales, were too formidable for Lewellin to withſtand; ſo that he was conſtrained once more to ſue for peace on ſuch terms as the king, who was then at Rothelan, thought fit to impoſe. This brought on a treaty between them, which being agreed to by William de Suthrey, prior of the order of Fryars preachers in England, Robert de Tibetot and Anthony Bek, on behalf of the king, and by Tudor ap Edenevat and Gronon ap Heylin, on the part of Lewellin, was concluded at Aberconway on the Wedneſday before Martinmas 1277, Lewellin for himſelf, and Robert de Tibetot for the king, ſwearing to obſerve the articles. At this period the WELCH ROLLS begin with the following inſtruments, viz.—The full powers granted under the privy-ſeal, the chancellor not being then arrived at Rothelan, to Robert de Tibetot to ſwear on the king's behalf.—The orders for obſervance of the treaty.—The full powers for accepting Lewellin's

Oath; all of them dated on the ſecond of November.—The articles of the treaty—and the letters patent acquitting Lewellin from the payment of 500 marks, which he was to pay into the king's exchequer at Cheſter, dated the 10th of November. From this time the rolls are continued, and contain all the different inſtruments which paſſed the great ſeal, touching the affairs of the principality and its marches; as alſo relating to the ſeveral perſons who were either employed or intereſted in thoſe parts, from that time, until Wales was thoroughly ſubdued; the rebellion raiſed by Rees ap Meredith intirely quaſhed by the execution of that traitor; and the ordinances for the ſettlement of that country, and incorporating it with England were eſtabliſhed.

The death of Margaret, called The Maid of Norway, queen of Scotland, without iſſue, which happened in the year 1290, threw that nation into the utmoſt confuſion, and divided it into parties for ſupporting the different pretenſions of the twelve claimants of the crown. Under theſe circumſtances all the competitors and the nobility of the kingdom unanimouſly reſolved to refer the matter to the judgment of Edward king of England, who readily undertook to be the arbitrator, hoping he might thereby eaſily obtain a recognition of the right which he claimed to the ſuperiority of Scotland. To theſe ends he convened the ſeveral competitors at Norham, a ſmall town ſituate on the Tweed, where it divides the two kingdoms. Here on the 12th of May 1291 he opened the conferences with requiring the claimants and nobility of Scotland to acknowledge his own right to the ſuperiority over that kingdom, and allowed them till the ſecond of June to give in their anſwer. Edward having received the anſwers of the competitors in the preſence of the Scotch nobility, they on the next day executed an inſtrument for giving Edward ſeiſin of the realm and caſtles of Scotland; this being deemed a ſtep neceſſary in law for enabling him to take cognizance of the cauſe, and to put his ſentence in execution; he having firſt giving ſecurity for reſtoring them in the ſame condition as he received them, within two months, after he had made his deciſion, to the perſon in whoſe favour the crown ſhould be adjudged. The manner of proceeding in the trial being regulated, Edward fixed on Berwick as the moſt convenient place for that purpoſe, and appointed the ſecond of Auguſt for the day of their firſt meeting; and in the mean time took ſeiſin of the kingdom, the guardians and caſtellans having on the 11th of June ſurrendered their truſts. Edward likewiſe, for the further ſecuring his acknowledged ſuperiority, took this opportunity of iſſuing a writ directing all the muniments, &c. in the treaſury of Edinburgh to be removed to Berwick: and they were accordingly in the preſence of the abbots of Dumfermelyn and Holyrood in Edinburgh, John de Lythegranes, bailiff of Lincoln, and Thomas Fiſſeburce, bailiff of Dumfreys, and keeper of the rolls of the kingdom of Scotland, delivered and depoſited at Berwick on the 23d of Auguſt following. The CALENDAR of which muniments, &c. is inſerted in this volume at page 331. The trial having proceeded according to the ſtipulations agreed on, Edward on the 17th day of November pronounced judgment in favour of John Baliol, and iſſued orders for putting the whole kingdom into his hands. Baliol having thus gotten ſeiſin of the realm of Scotland, ſwore fealty to the king of England at Norham; and after being crowned at Scone came to Newcaſtle upon Tyne, and there did homage to him.

Theſe tranſactions, and the influence and power gained in conſequence of them by king Edward, in reſpect to the affairs of Scotland; as alſo the intercourſe and connection which they introduced between the two kingdoms, occaſioned a great number of inſtruments to be paſſed under the great ſeal of England, the inrolments whereof gave riſe to thoſe records uſually denominated ROTULI SCOTIÆ, preſerved in the Tower of London; the CALENDAR of which rolls makes a conſiderable part of this volume.

Theſe rolls ſet out with the writ iſſued by Edward, in his 19th year, for giving poſſeſſion of the ſeveral caſtles in Scotland, of which he had obtained ſeiſin, into the cuſtody of Brian Fitz-Allan, and ſuch others of his knights as he had appointed to that ſervice; and are continued down to the twenty-ſecond year of king Edward the Fourth; from which time all the ſucceeding records that any-ways relate to our affairs with Scotland, are to be ſought for in the chapel of the rolls.

The immenſe variety of matter to which the ſeveral inſtruments entered on theſe records relate; the inſight thoſe inſtruments give into the affairs of both kingdoms as they ſtood, either ſeparate from or connected with each other; the ſeveral facts unnoticed by hiſtorians of which they inform us, and the immediate relation many of them have to landed property in the lowlands of Scotland, and in the marches and borders of the two kingdoms, are not the moſt important concerns that recommend thoſe records to our attention: and the advantages which muſt ariſe from the peruſal of them, will, it is hoped, juſtify the publication of their calendar.

It may not be improper to take notice in this place, that the Rotuli Scotiæ, and other records mentioned in this calendar, are carefully to be diſtinguiſhed from ſuch rotuli and records as originated in Scotland, and concern the private as well as public buſineſs of that kingdom unconnected with that of England. This caution becomes the more neceſſary, as it hath for many years paſt been a prevailing opinion propagated by many of our hiſtorians, and generally imbibed by the public, that Edward the Firſt, in order to the better ſecuring to himſelf, and his Succeſſors, the dependancy of Scotland, brought away, together with the regalia and ſtone of Scone, all the records belonging to that kingdom, and lodged them in his exchequer at Weſtminſter; where they remained until they were reſtored to the Scots by king Edward the Third, in conſequence of the treaty concluded between the two kingdoms, in the parliament held in the year 1328 at York, as ſome writers inform us; or, according to others, in that held at Northampton in the ſame year. Theſe hiſtorians likewiſe add, that ſuch re-delivery was made according to an inventory which had been taken of thoſe records when they were brought out of Scotland; and of which inventory they tell us, a memorandum is ſtill preſerved in the exchequer at London. To this poſitive aſſertion we ſhould not, however, implicitly ſubſcribe our belief, unleſs better authority for its veracity be produced than hath hitherto appeared; it being too common a practice with hiſtorians haſtily to tranſcribe from the writings of others, and upon their credit to ſtate facts without trying the truth of them by that teſt, from which alone they can abſolutely be aſcertained.

It is well known that Edward the Firſt did not omit the purſuit of any means, which ſeemed either neceſſary or conducive to eſtabliſh, with an high hand, his acknowleged ſuperiority over the kingdom of Scotland, and to confirm and perpetuate the enjoyment of ſuch ſuperiority to his ſucceſſors kings of England. In order thereunto, he not only encouraged all appeals from the ſentences and decrees of the kings of Scotland's court, to his own courts in England, and enjoined them to be made; but brought away the crown and ſcepter of Scotland, and the reſt of the regalia, together with the famous ſtone of Scone, upon which for many ages the inauguration of the Scottiſh kings had been performed; and placed the latter in the abbey church at Weſtminſter, where it ſtill remains. His principal motive for doing this laſt Act, ſeems to have been a deſire of making the poſſeſſion of that ſtone a teſtimony of his ſuperiority over the Scots, and a means of leſſening whatever hopes they might entertain of regaining their liberty; founding his ſentiments as well as his conduct, in this reſpect, on the ſuperſtitious opinion which univerſally prevailed throughout Scotland, that the ſovereignty of the Scots, and the locality and poſſeſſion of the ſtone of Scone were inſeparable. It will not however be denied that Edward upon his taking ſeiſin of the kingdom and caſtles of Scotland, purſuant to the ſtipulation made by him with the claimants and nobility of that realm, ordered all the Scottiſh records and muniments to be removed, although, the writs or precepts iſſued for that purpoſe not being extant, the place or places to which ſuch removal was ordered to be made, cannot at preſent be aſcertained.

The only allegations in reſpect to the Scottiſh records, on which the ſuppoſition of their having been brought away to Weſtminſter by Edward the Firſt can be grounded, are theſe, viz. That in conſequence of general orders given by that monarch, the ſeveral muniments found in the treaſury at Edinburgh were, in Auguſt 1292, taken from thence in the preſence of the abbots of Dumfermelyn and Holyroode in Edinburgh, John de Lythegranes, bailiff of Lincoln, and Thomas de Fiſſeburne, bailiff of Dumfrees, keeper of the rolls of the kingdom of Scotland, and depoſited at Berwick on the 23d day of that month; that much about the ſame time, ſundry records which had been brought from Edinburgh caſtle were likewiſe brought to Berwick; that John de Drokensford, keeper of the king's wardrobe, did, on the 16th day of January, in the twenty-firſt year of the reign of king Edward the Firſt, deliver, and probably at Berwick, to William de Marche the treaſurer and to the chamberlains of the king's exchequer at Weſtminſter, ſundry records and writings relating to the kingdom of Scotland; and that a memorandum ſchedule or inventory of Scottiſh records is to be met with in the king's exchequer at Weſtminſter. But no juſt inference can be drawn from theſe circumſtances, when duly conſidered, to induce a belief either that all the records of the kingdom of Scotland were by king Edward's order brought to Berwick; or, even in caſe they really were ſo, that all ſuch records were afterwards actually removed from Berwick to the king of England's exchequer at Weſtminſter.

Neither the Engliſh records or any hiſtorian have tranſmitted down to us the leaſt memorial or hint of Scottiſh records being brought to Berwick upon Tweed by order of Edward the Firſt, at or ſubſequent to the time of the diſpute between the competitors for the kingdom of Scotland, except ſuch as have been already mentioned. That thoſe were very few in number, and far from being the whole of the Scottiſh records, had we no other proofs, will indiſputably appear from the catalogue of them taken at the time of their removal from Edinburgh, and inſerted in the courſe of this * volume. The catalogue of thoſe muniments and writings relating to Scotland, which were on the 16th of January 1292-3 delivered by John de Drokensford to William de Marche, &c. which catalogue is likewiſe here printed †, is ſo far from proving the ſuppoſed removal of all the Scottiſh records to the Exchequer at Weſtminſter, that on the contrary it furniſhes full evidence, that great numbers of the records of Scotland never were carried out of that kingdom by Edward the Firſt.

The ſeventh article mentioned in that catalogue is, "an authentic atteſtation witneſſed by the before-mentioned William de Marche, John de Drokensford, and R. de Luda the king's clerk, and ſubſcribed by a "public notary, in the preſence of the archbiſhop of Dublin, and of the "biſhops of Durham and Glaſgow, touching the proteſtation made by "king Edward at Newcaſtle, in the preſence of his council; that the "then new created king of Scotland ſhould not be bound by thoſe "promiſes which he made upon certain articles whilſt the kingdom "was vacant." The title of this inſtrument as entered in the catalogue is followed by a memorandum, wherein we are informed, that ſuch records as were in the caſtle of Edinburgh at the time of the deceaſe of king Alexander, and conſiſting of ſundry revenue rolls and records of various matters relative to the affairs of Scotland, were, by order of the auditors of king Edward the Firſt, removed from thence by Ralph Baſſet, then appointed by Edward keeper thereof, and carried to Roxburgh caſtle; and that thoſe very records from the time of ſuch their removal, remained at Roxburgh caſtle until John Baliol was proclaimed and crowned king of Scotland, when, purſuant to king Edward's writ for that purpoſe, they were under the ſeals and by the hands of William de Langetone, keeper of the king of England's wardrobe, William de Karletone, one of the barons of the exchequer at Weſtminſter, and John de Drokensford, one of king Edward's clerks, delivered to Alexander Baliol, chamberlain of Scotland, for the proper uſe of John Baliol king of Scotland; and the ſame memorandum not only further informs us, that an inventory of thoſe ſeveral records were alſo entered in above-mentioned authenticated atteſtation, but ſupplies us with a copy of that inventory, whereby it appears that they conſiſted of a great number of rolls and memoranda of revenue accounts, fine rolls, wills of Scottiſh kings, inquiſitions, perambulations, and terriers of lands; rolls and ſchedules of fealties done in the Iſle of Man, petitions, rolls of charters, and confirmations, king's and other letters, and a great variety of other different muniments relating to the kingdom of Scotland.

The only inſtance that we meet with of any tranſmiſſion of Scottiſh records having been made from Berwick to Weſtminſter during the reign of king Edward the Firſt, is that already mentioned of the delivery by John de Drokensford to the treaſurer and chamberlains of the exchequer on the 16th of January 1292-3. But the records ſo delivered, as appears by the catalogue of them, were ſuch only as had been drawn up either at Norham or New-caſtle, at and about the times that John Baliol ſwore fealty, and did homage to king Edward, and ſolely related to thoſe matters.—In confirmation of this, and in further proof that no other of the Scottiſh records brought to and depoſited at Berwick were intended to be removed to the exchequer at Weſtminſter, there is inſerted in the ſame catalogue, another memorandum purporting, that all ſuch records as had been brought from the caſtle of Edinburgh to Berwick upon Tweed, continued at that place, until the 16th of September in the twenty-fourth year of the reign of king Edward the Firſt, when they were by virtue of his royal mandate, delivered to Hugh de Creſſingham, then treaſurer of Scotland.

The concluſion which hath been drawn from an inventory of ancient Scottiſh records being ſtill preſerved in the king's exchequer at Weſtminſter, that all the ancient records of Scotland were once actually there, and that they were afterwards delivered back in the reign of king Edward the Third, will likewiſe, on inquiry into that matter, be found erroneous. That there is now remaining, amongſt the exchequer records, in the chapter-houſe at Weſtminſter, an ancient inſtrument containing the titles of ſeveral records and muniments belonging to the kingdom of Scotland, will not be denied; but that inſtrument is ſo far from being what it is called by the hiſtorians, An Inventory taken of the Scotch Records at the time of their being brought into the exchequer at London by king Edward the Firſt, that on examination it proves to be no more than a ſchedule of all the bulls, charters, and other muniments, which were found in the king of Scotland's treaſury at Edinburgh, and on their being inſpected in that repoſitory by Thomas de Carvaco, Ralph de Boſco, and William de Dumfrees on the 31ſt of Auguſt 1282, near ten years before the death of the young queen Margaret and the diſpute between the claimants of the kingdom, were ordered to be continued and preſerved in that place, together with ſundry letters and other papers relating to Scottiſh affairs, put into boxes, coffers, and bags, and ſecured under the ſeals of thoſe commiſſioners.

Whether any mention of ancient rolls or records belonging to the kingdom of Scotland, being brought from thence to England by king Edward the Firſt, was made in the treaty of 1328, and whether king Edward the Third made any ſtipulation in that treaty for their reſtitution to the Scots, muſt for ever remain uncertain, as the original treaty is not extant, and no tranſcript either of the whole or any part of it is now to be found on record or elſewhere.

Knyghton and other hiſtorians ſay poſitively, that this treaty, and the ceſſion of the ſuperiority over Scotland, were made againſt the opinion of all the nobility, and without the advice and aſſent of Parliament. And therefore ſome of our later hiſtorians ſuppoſing that it was the intereſt of Iſabel the queen mother, and of Roger de Mortimer, the promoters of that treaty, to ſecrete a matter which would inflame the people againſt them, when they came to be apprized of it with certainty, have aſſerted, that this was the reaſon why that treaty is not to be found upon record; but, this, however, could not have been the caſe: it being almoſt certain that the treaty was concluded openly, and with the conſent of the parliaments at York and Northampton. So that it is moſt likely the original treaty met with the ſame fate with that of the rolls of the parliaments of the three firſt years of king Edward the Third, all of which are now loſt. Whether the fact be ſo, or not, it may with good reaſon be conjectured that neither the condition, ſituation, or diſpoſal of the ancient records of Scotland were taken Notice of, either in that treaty, or during the negotiations preparatory thereto. For had any proviſion been therein made in regard to them, ſome notice thereof would undoubtedly have been taken in one or more of the ſeveral writs and other inſtruments, which were iſſued on account of that treaty; whereas they are totally ſilent on that head, as will appear by the following view of them.

The letters patent granted to Henry Percy and William de Souche, on the 1ſt of March 1328, by king Edward the Third[*], with the conſent of the prelates, earls, barons, and commons of the kingdom, in the parliament then aſſembled at York, authorizing them to ſwear upon the king's ſoul to his renunciation of his ſuperiority over Scotland, do not mention any records or other inſtruments relating to the kingdom of Scotland as remaining in Edward's hands, and then agreed to be either delivered up or annulled, excepting ſuch bonds, conventions, and contracts as related to the ſubjections of the kingdom of Scotland, and the letters, charters, muniments, and other inſtruments which paſſed in conſequence thereof. Edward's letter of the 20th of December 1330 to David king of Scotland[†], concerning the reſtitution of poſſeſſions, &c. which were to be made in conſequence of the treaty of 1328; the letters patent granted by Edward on the 16th of February following to his commiſſioners, for the due obſervance of that treaty[‡]; his letters of the 24th day of the ſame month to David king of Scotland[§], Thomas Randolph earl of Murray, the biſhop of Saint Andrews, and others[||], concerning the lands which were to be reſtored; and alſo his letter of the 22d of April 1332 to the earl of Murray[], then guardian of the kingdom of Scotland; are all of them likewiſe ſilent as to any ancient records being then agreed to be delivered up to the Scots. Laſtly, had thoſe records been actually delivered from the king's exchequer at Weſtminſter, and carried back into Scotland, ſome receipt, acknowledgment, or memorial of ſuch delivery would indiſputably have appeared in Edward's exchequer; and ſome entry, either of their return, or of the warrants for that purpoſe, would have been made in one or other of the offices of record in Scotland: but no ſuch are even pretended to be met with in either. So that upon the whole, there is the greateſt reaſon to believe, that the ſtory propagated of king Edward the Firſt's having brought out of Scotland all the ancient records of that kingdom, and of his having lodged them in his exchequer at Weſtminſter is fabulous; and on the contrary, that he brought with him to London, thoſe muniments only which related to the claims of the ſeveral competitors for the crown; his ſovereignty over Scotland; the rolls of the homage and fealty of John Baliol; and ſuch other inſtruments as were framed and paſſed about the time that the kingdom of Scotland was decreed to the latter. In confirmation of the obſervations here made, it may not improperly be added, that upon the firſt of July 1328, being the ſame year in which the treaty with Scotland was ſigned, king Edward the Third being at Bordeſley, directed his writ under the privy-ſeal to the abbot and convent at Weſtminſter, wherein, after reciting "that his council had in his parliament "held at Northampton agreed, that the Stone whereupon the kings of "Scotland uſed to ſit at the time of their coronation, and which was then "in the keeping of that abbot and convent, ſhould be ſent to Scotland, and "that he had ordered the ſheriffs of London to receive the ſame from "them by indenture, and cauſe it to be carried to the queen mother;" he commands the abbot and convent, to deliver up the ſaid Stone to thoſe ſheriffs, as ſoon as they ſhould come to them for that purpoſe *.

Now it cannot be ſuppoſed that however great the eſteem of the Scots for that Stone might have been, and whatever fatality they might place on the poſſeſſion of it, they would have taken ſuch ſteps for regaining it as we find they did, without at the ſame time uſing the like endeavours for the re-delivery to them of their ancient records and muniments, had any ſuch been brought away by Edward the Firſt. And we may reaſonably conclude, that if any ſuch application, and any orders thereupon had been made, ſome traces of them, as well as of thoſe relating to the Stone at Scone, would have appeared amongſt our Engliſh records of thoſe times: whereas no ſuch are to be found.

It is ſtill further obſervable, that the Scotch writers themſelves are not agreed in the ſtory of Edward's having taken away all the Scottiſh records; for Hector Boethius, Buchanan, and others alledge, that thoſe records were burnt in Scotland by order of king Edward the Firſt; which fact, if it was one, is again denied by Tyrrel and other Engliſh writers, who ſuppoſe this allegation to be a calumny invented by Boethius.

Whatever may have been the fate of thoſe ancient records and muniments, we have, however, certain and indubitable evidence that in later times, the moſt valuable records of Scotland were forcibly brought from Edinburgh to London; and that in conſequence of ſuch act of violence and oppreſſion they became great ſufferers, many being totally loſt, and others greatly damaged in conſequence of ſuch removal.

* Ex autographo penes decanum et capitulum Weſtm.

Cromwell after the battle of Worceſter, having ravaged Scotland, cauſed the records of the parliament and courts of juſtice of that kingdom to be removed to the Tower of London, where they were put under the care of Mr. Ryley then keeper of the records there. Theſe proceedings were ſoon found to be ſo detrimental and grievous to the people of Scotland, and ſuch an impediment to the diſpatch and adminiſtration of juſtice in that kingdom, that application was made by the Scots to the then council of ſtate in England for redreſs; the council thereupon reported this matter to the then parliament, which on the 9th of September 1653 referred back to the council of ſtate, "to give order, that ſuch regiſters "as concerned private perſons rights, ſecurities, and conveyances of "lands, bonds, and contracts between party and party, with their "warrants, and all proceſs of plea, ſhould be ſent back thither to be "diſpoſed of as the commiſſioners for the adminiſtration of juſtice there "ſhould find expedient, for the good of that ſervice; but the parliament "at the ſame time directed, that ſuch muniments as were of public con-"cernment and for the benefit and advantage of the common-wealth, "ſhould be preſerved and kept." Notwithſtanding theſe orders, no further ſteps were taken in this matter till the 23d of July 1657, when the then council of ſtate ordered ſuch of thoſe records and regiſters as were then remaining in the Tower London, to be ſent into Scotland with the firſt opportunity, and delivered into the charge of the proper officer appointed for keeping the records in Edinburgh Caſtle; and for that purpoſe it was referred to the Maſter of the rolls, Sir Archibald Johnſton, Lord Wareſton, Gabriel Berk, and William Riley, or any three of them, to take care that ſuch records, writings, and regiſters of Scotland then remaining in the Tower of London, as concerned private men's caſes and intereſts only, ſhould be ſeparated from thoſe of a public nature; to the intent, that thoſe only that were of a private nature might be ſent into Scotland.

This committee having made their report to the council of ſtate on the 28th of September following, it was ordered, that the books ſpecified in the report, as being ſevered and ſet apart by the committee, ſhould be ſent into Scotland, and delivered into the Caſtle of Edinburgh to the proper offices there for keeping the ſaid records, and that the Lord Wareſton ſhould ſign a book wherein the entry of the day and year of the beginning and ending of the books ſo to be ſent, is entered, and which book was to remain in England: and that then the books ſhould be delivered to

Sir Archibald Johnſton, to be ſent into Scotland in a ſhip which the commiſſioners of the admiralty and navy were ordered to appoint to that ſervice; and the ſame were accordingly on that day delivered by Mr. Riley to Sir Archibald Johnſton.

A copy of the ſeveral reſolutions of the commons, and of the orders of the council of ſtate, together with an inventory of the ſaid records drawn out purſuant to ſuch orders, is inſerted in this work*, as being in ſome meaſure connected with the matters contained in the preceding part of the volume.

After the Reſtoration, ſuch other of the records as had been brought out of Scotland by Cromwell, and at the time of ſending back the before-mentioned books and regiſters, were detained in the Tower of London by order of the council of ſtate on account of their being of a public nature, were likewiſe ſent back to Scotland; but in their paſſage thither many of them were damaged, and ſome loſt †. Mr. Ryley before the departure of theſe records from the Tower, with his uſual diligence and accuracy, had ſelected from them, and left in manuſcript at his death, the proceedings of the parliament of Scotland, from the 15th of May 1639 to the 8th of March 1650; containing the Heads of the acts and ordinances of the Scottiſh nation, and the tranſactions between England and Scotland; and alſo the proceedings of the general aſſembly of Scotland concerning religion, king, and kingdom; government of the kirk, their faith and covenant, their proceedings therein, and ratifications thereof by their parliaments, with divers declarations, remonſtrances, and reſolutions thereof.

This manuſcript falling into the hands of the editor, was communicated by him to ſeveral of his friends, who finding that it contained many very curious particulars relating to the hiſtory of the two kingdoms, during the times to which it relates, perſuaded him to make it public; he for ſome time declined the taſk, but being no longer able to reſiſt their importunities, hath now in compliance therewith given it a place in this volume ‡.

The memoranda concerning the records relating to Ireland, and the memoranda from the parliament rolls touching ſundry matters relating to that kingdom § may not be thought improper companions to the foregoing calendars: but ſome reaſons for inſerting at full length, the MEMORANDA DE HIBERNIA, of the 49th and 50th of Edward the Third, may be expected ‖.

Theſe MEMORANDA were tranſcribed by Mr. Stuart, from the original contained in the roll or bundle of memoranda de Hibernia, from the 47th to the 50th of Edward the Third, now remaining in the Tower of London, and are extremely curious. They inform us not only of a very extraordinary and remarkable tranſaction little known, but throw no inconſiderable light upon a part of our hiſtory, of which the hiſtorians have been either altogether ſilent, or touching on but ſlightly, have left dark and obſcure.

‡ P. 357. § P. 441. ‖ P. 444.

From them we learn that king Edward the Third having exhauſted his finances by the wars of France, Spain, Guienne, Brittany, and other parts, and being no longer able to ſupport the charge of carrying them on without the aid of his ſubjects, he, in the 49th year of his reign, commiſſioned Sir Nicholas de Dagworth to go over into Ireland, and ſolicit an aid from his parliament there, which for that purpoſe he had cauſed to be ſummoned at Kilkenny, on the Saturday before the octaves of St. Michael.

Dagworth accordingly preſented himſelf before this parliament, where he firſt read the commiſſion with which he was charged, and then explained the purpoſes thereof; and having copiouſly expatiated on the great expences incurred by the king in the proſecution of the war in Ireland, undertaken for the preſervation and defence of that kingdom, which expences, on account of the great charges he was at in carrying on his wars elſewhere, he was no longer able of himſelf to defray, exhorted them to take theſe matters into their conſideration, and that each of them ſhould according to their ſeveral abilities, and the exigences of their ſtate, grant ſuch reaſonable ſupplies as were neceſſary for ſupporting the war in that realm, and for the preſervation, defence, and government of their country. The two houſes of parliament, after ſome deliberation, excuſed themſelves from complying with the king's demands; aſſuring Dagworth, that on account of their poverty and inability it was at that time impoſſible for them to bear any part of thoſe expences. On the receipt of this anſwer Sir Nicholas, in conſequence of a power given him in his commiſſion, ſignified the king's pleaſure, that two eccleſiaſticks, as proctors for the biſhop and clergy of each dioceſe, two laymen, as repreſentatives of each county, and two burgeſſes for each city and borough in Ireland, ſhould be ſent into England, there to attend upon the king, and furniſhed with full powers from their reſpective conſtituents, there to meet, conſult, and agree with him and his council, as well on the proper means for the government of Ireland, as for the aid and ſupport of the king's war in that kingdom.

Dagworth when he came into Ireland had brought with him letters patent under the king's privy ſeal, commanding William de Windeſore, then lieutenant of that kingdom, in caſe the prelates, great men, and commons ſhould refuſe to charge themſelves with a reaſonable part of the expences of the king's wars, that he ſhould then take ſuch ſteps as were incumbent on him towards ſending the repreſentatives to England; and, therefore, upon a flat denial being given by the parliament, Sir William convened the Iriſh council, and in conſequence of their unanimous opinion, writs bearing teſte at Kilkenny, on the 25th day of October, 49th Edward the Third, were in the king's name iſſued to all the archbiſhops, biſhops, ſheriffs, ſtewards, mayors, bailiffs, and other officers of the ſeveral dioceſes, counties, cities, and boroughs within the realm, and others whom it might concern, commanding them to proceed to the election of their reſpective proctors and repreſentatives, in number and manner as is before-mentioned; and that ſuch perſons ſo to be elected, ſhould, at the coſt and charges of the electors, appear before the king and council in England on the 17th day of February then next, at whatever place the king might then happen to be; and that ſuch writs ſhould be returned into the chancery of Ireland before The Feaſt of Saint Catherine.

The ſeveral returns made to theſe writs differed greatly. A ſtrict obedience was paid to many of them. To others, returns were made ſignifying an impoſſibility of compliance on account of the poverty of the electors, and the frequent deſtructions, robberies, and depredations committed by the rebels. Others were complied with, but the returns made to them had a clauſe, Salvis Libertatibus Eccleſiæ et liberis Conſuetudinibus terræ Hibernicanæ. Some boroughs on account of their poverty elected and returned but one repreſentative. Others elected two, and gave them the full powers required, except that of charging their conſtituents with aids or expences. Others returned, that they were not compellable to elect repreſentatives, and ſend them into England. And ſome again made different ſpecial returns. The account of theſe proceedings; the form of the writs iſſued for the elections of the proctors for the biſhops and clergy, and of repreſentatives for the counties, cities, and boroughs; the conduct of the electors; and the ſeveral returns which were made to thoſe writs, form the Memoranda de Hibernia herein laid before the public, and which in many reſpects are not only extremely curious, but develope ſome very intereſting points of hiſtory, and manifeſt the vague ideas that the people of Ireland at that time had of the conſtitution of their country, and that there was no ſuch regular plan of oppoſition formed amongſt them, as hath been adopted in later times.

It doth not appear by our records, ſo far at leaſt as hath hitherto been diſcovered, whether the perſons elected in conſequence of the above-mentioned writs did, or did not attend the king and his council in England, purſuant to the mandate given in the writs; and yet there can be but little doubt of their having paid obedience thereto, ſince there is now preſerved among the records of the chancery of Ireland, a writ under the great ſeal of that kingdom, directed to the lord juſtice and chancellor there, requiring them to levy the reaſonable expences of thoſe repreſentatives or commiſſioners; and Cox in his hiſtory of * Ireland, ſays, that accordingly John Draper, who ſerved for Cork, had a particular mandate to the mayor and bailiffs of that city, to pay him his reaſonable expences incurred as aforeſaid.

The ſending Sir Nicholas de Dagworth over into Ireland on purpoſe to execute the before-mentioned commiſſion ſeems a very extraordinary and unneceſſary proceeding, eſpecially when it is conſidered that ſuch commiſſion might equally have been entruſted to the governor and lieutenant of Ireland, who was then upon the ſpot, and whoſe province, according to the uſual courſe of buſineſs, it more peculiarly was, to tranſact matters of that ſort.

Some political views, however, induced the Engliſh council to confide the commiſſion to a different perſon. Sir William de Windeſore was in high favour with king Edward, and his then new taken miſtreſs Alice Perrers; but at the ſame time he was become extremely unpopular in Ireland. His conduct, and that of the officers employed under him, had drawn upon him the odium of many of the leading men in that kingdom; and a ſtrong party had been formed againſt him in the king of England's court, at the head of which prince Richard and the Duke of Lancaſter appeared. From thoſe circumſtances it ſeems probable, that the council in England thought it neceſſary for their purpoſes, to weaken the conſequence of Sir William de Windeſore, by throwing a ſlur upon him in his government; and that notwithſtanding Sir Nicholas de Dagworth was avowedly ſent over into Ireland, with a public commiſſion to tranſact the king's buſineſs with the parliament at Kilkenny, yet that the real motive for his journey was, the enabling him to execute ſome private inſtructions which had been given to him by the duke of Lancaſter, and the Engliſh council, to inquire into the conduct of the lieutenant; hoping, that thereby ſome means might be found out to ruin him and his patroneſs Alice Perrers, in the king's eſteem.

In the year 1369, the government of Ireland, under the then new title of lieutenant, had been by king Edward the Firſt conferred on this Sir William de Windeſore, who in conſideration of that ſervice had a grant of the manor and caſtle of Dungarvon, and of Black Caſtle, to hold to him, and the heirs of his body; as alſo a penſion of one thouſand marks per annum, payable out of the exchequer until ſuch time as the king ſhould ſettle lands and rents of that value to him and his heirs for ever.

It was not long after his appointment, that a diſlike to him began to manifeſt itſelf amongſt the Iriſh. Upon Sir William's arrival in Ireland, he had called a parliament at Kilkenny, in which a ſubſidy of three thouſand pounds was granted the king, as was likewiſe a further ſum of two thouſand pounds in the ſubſequent parliament at Balidoyle; theſe ſupplies were repreſented to Edward as exactions impoſed upon the people by Sir William de Windeſore, and not as aids granted by the free conſent of their repreſentatives; for which reaſon the king iſſued his writ, commanding him to deſiſt from levying thoſe ſums *. Theſe repreſentations were followed by ſundry articles of complaints, impeaching him and his officers of divers torts, wrongs, and deceits practiſed by them in their reſpective departments; and which, together with the inquiſitions taken upon thoſe articles, in the Court of King's Bench in Ireland, were, in the year 1374 tranſmitted to the king's council in England, by the hands of Richard Deere and William Stapolyn, ſent hither for that purpoſe, and who, as is mentioned in the cloſe of theſe articles now amongſt the records in the Tower of London, were prepared to prove other miſconducts in the lieutenant †. Theſe articles and inquiſitions were ſoon after increaſed by the tranſmiſſion of ſundry ‡ others. What proceedings were held in conſequence of them do not appear, but we learn that the king ſoon found that he had been miſled in regard to the two ſums of three thouſand pounds, and two thouſand pounds granted in the parliament of Kilkenny and Balidoyle, and that thoſe ſums, inſtead of being exactions impoſed on the people by the lieutenant, had really been granted by the ſpontaneous and free will of the lords and commons, in aid of the king's wars, and that he, therefore, iſſued his writs for the levying § them.

It is difficult at this diſtance of time to determine, whether there were any real grounds for the complaints exhibited againſt Sir William de Windeſore, or whether they did not ariſe from ſome political motives in the king's councils in England, partly to eſtabliſh the power of a few of the leading men in it, and partly to oblige ſome of their friends in Ireland.

§ Rot. Clauſ. 48 Ed. III. m. 27.

Edward the Third was grown old, and in the latter part of his reign became enamoured with Alice Perrers or Perriers, who had been one of the maids of honor to his late queen Philippa.

The aſcendency which this favourite ſoon gained over the old king; her fondneſs of power; her rapacity in amaſſing riches; and the attachment which ſhe ſhewed to the intereſt and ſupport of Sir William de Windeſore, alarmed the jealouſies of the principal perſons in the king's court, and particularly thoſe of the young prince Richard, and his uncle the duke of Lancaſter; ſo that every artifice and endeavour were made uſe of to leſſen her in the king's favour, and to blacken her character with the people. Amongſt other faults aſcribed to her, ſhe was accuſed of promoting, and by her intereſt favouring ſuits in the king's courts, in order that ſhe might receive for her own benefit, ſome ſhare of the ſums of money recovered in thoſe cauſes. This occaſioned an ordinance to be made in the laſt parliament held at Weſtminſter, on the Monday after the Feaſt of Saint George, in the 50th year of king Edward, which ordinance, after reciting, "that complaint had been made to the king that ſome women had purſued divers cauſes and quarrels in the king's court, by way of maintenance, and in order to receive part of the ſums recovered, which conduct was diſpleaſing to the king;" forbid all women, and eſpecially Alice Perrers, upon pain, as to the ſaid Alice Perrers, of the forfeiture of all her lands and goods and of being baniſhed the realm *.

Soon after the paſſing this ordinance, Sir Nicholas de Dagworth (a retainer to the duke of Lancaſter, and who, on ſeveral occaſions, and particularly when he was in the preceding year ſent into Ireland with the king's commiſſion to the parliament aſſembled at Kilkenny, had given many inſtances of his animoſity to Sir William de Windeſore) was, by the king's council, ordered to go again into Ireland to execute ſeveral matters wherewith he was charged; and which were ſaid by that council to be highly profitable to the king and his realms. This new appointment of Sir Nicholas de Dagworth coming to the ears of Alice Perrers, who was at that time privately married to Sir William de Windeſore † and ſhe knowing that Sir Nicholas was his inveterate enemy, and that under whatſoever ſpecious pretence he might be ſaid to be ſent a ſecond time into Ireland, the real cauſe of his going thither was to arraign the conduct of Sir William de Windeſore, prevailed with the king to countermand his journey. The duke of Lancaſter finding himſelf thus diſappointed in his deſigns againſt Sir William, waited on the king, who was then at Havering, and being by Roger Beauchamp the king's chamberlain previouſly ſhewn a petition which had been put into his hand by Sir William de Windeſore, in order to its being delivered to the king, and requeſting his countermand of Sir Nicholas de Dagworth, the duke earneſtly ſolicited the king's revocation of that countermand.

* Rot. Parl. 50 Ed. III. m. 45.

† Errors dans le jugement d'Alice Perrers. Rot. Parl. 2 Ric. II. n. 36.

The king for ſome time perſiſted in his refuſal, alledging that it did not ſeem reaſonable to him, that any man's enemy ſhould be his judge; but the duke aſſuring the king, that there was no proof of any enmity ſubſiſting between the parties, and that it was for the advantage and profit both of the king and kingdom that the council had ordered Sir Nicholas to go into Ireland: and propoſing that both Sir William de Windeſore and Sir Nicholas de Dagworth ſhould come into the king's preſence, and if Sir William could prove that any enmity ſubſiſted between them, then Sir Nicholas de Dagworth ſhould not go into Ireland; but in failure of ſuch proof, that then the order of the council ſhould be carried into execution; the king aſſented to the propoſition. On the duke's coming out of the royal apartments he was met by Alice Perrers, who preſſed him to uſe his good offices for preventing Sir Nicholas's journey to Ireland; but ſhe could obtain no other anſwer from the duke than this; that he could not do any thing in reſpect to that matter but what the king ordered.

Alice not being able to get any further anſwer from the duke, left him; and that evening renewing her ſuit to the king, found means to obtain his orders for countermanding Sir Nicholas; which orders were inſtantly diſpatched and delivered to him. The duke coming the next morning to the king's bedſide to take his leave, to his great ſurprize was commanded by the king on his bleſſing that he ſhould not by any means whatſoever permit Sir Nicholas de Dagworth to proceed to Ireland; notwithſtanding the order which on the day before had been iſſued by the council for that purpoſe.

This matter made one of the articles exhibited againſt Alice Perrers, on the 22d of December 1371, and of which ſhe was found guilty by a jury formed out of the officers of the king's houſhold.

It is almoſt certain that this proſecution carried on againſt Alice Perrers, and the treatment which her huſband Sir William de Windeſore met with from the duke of Lancaſter and the king's council in England, proceeded from political motives, rather than from any oppreſſions or other crimes committed either by Sir William or Alice his wife; for, in the very next year, viz. 3d. Ric. II. Sir William was in great favour with the king, who by indenture

indenture retained him with one hundred men at arms to ſerve him for half a year, and had reſtitution of all the lands which were in the king's hands, by reaſon of the forfeiture of his wife Alice Perrers; the judgment againſt whom was alſo reverſed. After this, Sir William was in the expedition into France under the command of Thomas Woodſtock earl of Buckingham, in aid of the duke of Britany; and laſtly, on the barony of Windſore deſcending to him as the right heir, he was ſummoned to parliament in the 5th, 6th, and 7th years of king Richard the Second.

The illuſtration which the ancient charters here printed afford to the hiſtories of the two kingdoms of England and Scotland, and the ſeveral curious particulars hitherto unnoticed, wherewith they furniſh us, will ſufficiently apologize for their being placed in this volume.

For inſtance only in reſpect to the firſt of thoſe Charters.

Roger de Hoveden, who is extremely circumſtantial in his annals of king Richard the Firſt, and more particularly ſo in the detail which he gives us of the progreſs of that monarch from Nottingham to Wincheſter, in the year after his return from his captivity in Auſtria and Germany, tells us, that William king of Scotland, attended by moſt of his nobility, met him at Clipſton, in his way to Wincheſter; that as ſoon as the two kings arrived at Northampton, William earneſtly ſolicited king Richard for the reſtitution to him of the counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Weſtmorland, and Lancaſhire, but that Richard abſolutely refuſing to comply with his requeſt; in lieu thereof, and in the preſence of all the nobility and attendants on each court, granted and confirmed by his charter, that whenever any king of Scotland upon ſummons ſent by the king of England came to attend the Engliſh court, ſuch Scottiſh king on his entering the Engliſh borders ſhould be received and conducted with divers ceremonies and formalities, and at the expence of the king of England, enjoy certain daily pecuniary and other allowances; not only on his journey to the Engliſh court, but during his ſtay there, and until his return into his own country; and that ſuch charter was on Tueſday in Eaſter Week, being the twelfth day of April, delivered to William, at Northampton. This account hath implicitly been tranſcribed and adopted by ſeveral ſubſequent writers in the hiſtories which they give us of thoſe times.

The charter thus alluded to by Hoveden is undoubtedly that which is now firſt printed at page 347, of this work, although the before-mentioned author is in ſeveral inſtances extremely defective and erroneous, as well in ſtating its contents, as in the day and occaſion which he fixes on for its being granted.

In the firſt place this inſtrument, inſtead of being dated at Northampton on the twelfth, according to that author, actually bears teſte at Wincheſter on the ſeventeenth of April in the fifth year of Richard's reign, which then happened to be Low Sunday and the day of Richard's ſecond coronation; at which ſolemnity William king of Scotland aſſiſted, and carried the ſword of ſtate before the king, by virtue of his being earl of Huntingdon.

Secondly, the reception of the Scottiſh king on his entrance on the Engliſh confines, and his conduct, as well to as, from the court of the king of England, was by far more pompous and reſpectful than is ſtated by Hoveden. For the charter informs us, that he was to be received on the borders by the biſhop of Durham, the ſheriff, and all the barons of Northumberland, who were to conduct him as far as the river Teiſe, where he was to be received by the archbiſhop of York, and the ſheriff, and all the barons of Yorkſhire. By them he was to be conducted as far as to the biſhopric of Lincoln, where the biſhop of that dioceſe, with the ſheriff and barons of the county, were to receive and conduct him to the extremities of their liberties; and the like ceremonies were to be obſerved in all the counties and biſhoprics through which he was to paſs, until his arrival at the Engliſh court.

Thirdly, this charter, inſtead of being a grant of intire new liberties and indulgences to the Scottiſh king. either in order to make him ſome recompence for his diſappointment in not obtaining the reſtitution of the counties of Northumberland, Weſtmorland, Cumberland, and Lancaſhire; or for the better enabling him to attend the Engliſh court when called upon to do homage, and ſwear fealty for the earldom of Huntington, and then primarily flowing from the immediate munificence of king Richard, as Hoveden ſtates it, and as muſt have been the caſe, had either of the before-mentioned cauſes been the inducement for granting that charter; it is evident upon the face of the charter itſelf, that it is no more then a renewal and confirmation of ancient liberties and rights, uſually enjoyed by the kings of Scotland on their coming to the Engliſh Court, antecedent either to the reſumption of the counties of Northumberland, Weſtmorland, Cumberland, and Lancaſhire, by king Henry the Second, and the inveſtiture of the earldom of Huntingdon in the Scottiſh kings; or to the ceſſion in favour of the Scots of thoſe four northern counties made by king Stephen.

Laſtly, this charter diſcovers to us, that, in times much earlier than thoſe before-mentioned, it had been uſual for the kings of Scotland to viſit the courts of our Engliſh monarchs, on ſeveral occaſions; that at ſuch times they were, at the expence of the kings of England, received and entertained with a magnificence, ſplendor, and reſpect ſuitable to the character of ſuch royal viſitors, and the dignity of their high rank.

The ſeal, together with its counterſeal, or reverſe, appendent to this inſtrument, may at preſent be conſidered as an unique, no other impreſs of the ſame ſort, as far as is now known, having been hitherto diſcovered. The legends round both parts are the ſame with thoſe on the front, and reverſe, of the two great ſeals of king Richard the Firſt, icons of which are exhibited by Mr. Sanford in his Genealogical Hiſtory of the Kings and Queens of England, p. 55. viz. On the ſeal—RICARDUS DEI GRATIA REX ANGLORUM; and on the counterſeal—RICARDUS DUX NORMANORUM et AQUITANORUM ET COMES ANDEGAVORUM; but the charges on them are different from thoſe which appear in Sandford, as may eaſily be ſeen by carefully comparing them together. Some perſons perhaps may from hence ſuppoſe, that king Richard the Firſt had three different great ſeals fabricated at different times, during his reign. But it is moſt likely that he had not. For as the ſeal affixed to this charter is of a ſmaller ſize than that of either of Richard's great ſeals which are commonly known, and as the impreſſion is not taken off on green, but red wax, theſe circumſtances make it probable, that he had no more than two great ſeals. And it may with better reaſon be conjectured, that although this inſtrument appears to have been paſſed by the hand of William biſhop of Ely the king's chancellor, and that from thence it muſt be inferred, that it was the great ſeal which he affixed to it; yet, that this ſeal is actually no other than the privy ſeal of king Richard, and that his firſt great ſeal having been loſt near the Iſle of Cyprus, as hath been before obſerved, and there not having been time for making a new one, previous to his coronation at Wincheſter, he cauſed his privy ſeal to be made uſe of inſtead of the great ſeal, for paſſing this and all ſuch charters and other grants, as, from his haſte or neceſſities, he thought proper to iſſue at the time of that ſolemnity.

The ſeal of William the Lyon, king of Scotland, here exhibited at page 349, is likewiſe engraven in Mr. Anderſon's Numiſmata Scotiæ, but the charter to which it is here affixed, and the charter and ſeal of earl David exhibited at page 350, 351, are now firſt publiſhed from the originals.

That no endeavours might be wanting on the part of the editor, to render the reading of the muniments mentioned in the ſeveral Calendars inſerted in the courſe of this volume, eaſy and uſeful to ſuch as may be deſirous of peruſing thoſe inſtruments with accuracy, he hath prefixed three copper plates, exhibiting all the various hands in which the ſeveral charters, and other muniments of this kingdom, have been written, from the reign of king William the Conqueror to that of queen Elizabeth.

Proceedings relating to the carrying back into Scotland ſeveral of the Scottiſh records.

Extract from the Journals Dom. Com.

Friday the 9th of September 1653.

Alderman Titchborne reports from the council of ſtate, That it be humbly offered to the parliament, as a neceſſary thing for the diſpatch and ready adminiſtration of juſtice in Scotland, and eaſe of the people there, that ſuch regiſters in the Tower as relate to and concern private perſons rights, ſecurities, and conveyances of lands, bonds, and contracts betwixt party and party, with their warrants, and all proceſs of plea, be forthwith ſent down to Scotland, to be diſpoſed of as the commiſſioners for adminiſtration of juſtice there ſhall find expedient for the good of that ſervice.

Ordered by the parliament, That it be referred to the council of ſtate to take care, and to give order, that ſuch regiſters as concern private perſons rights, ſecurities, and conveyances of lands, bonds and contracts between party and party, with their warrants, and all proceſs of plea, be ſent back to Scotland, to be diſpoſed of as the commiſſioners for the adminiſtration of juſtice there ſhall find expedient for the good of that ſervice; and that ſuch as are of public concernment, and for the benefit and advantage of the commonwealth, be preſerved and kept; and that the council of ſtate do likewiſe take care of the ſafe keeping of the records in the Tower. And it is alſo ordered, That ſuch perſon and perſons as ſhall have the cuſtody of the regiſters which are to remain here, be impowered and authorized to give extracts out of the ſame unto ſuch perſons as ſhall deſire it; and that ſuch extracts ſhall have the like faith, and be of the like validity in Scotland, as extracts made there from ſuch regiſters have uſually had.

Order of Council.

Friday, 18*th September* 1657.

His Highneſs preſent,

Lord Preſident,	Major-General Skippon,
Lord Deputy,	Colonel Jones,
Lord Strickland,	Mr. Secretary,
Colonel Sydenham,	General Diſbrowe.

WHEREAS by an order of his highneſs and the council of the 23d of July laſt, it was ordered, That all ſuch records and regiſters concerning private perſons, and proceedings between party and party in Scotland, as are now remayning in the Tower of London, be ſent into Scotland with the firſt opportunity, and delivered into the charge of the proper officer appointed for keeping the records at Edenburgh caſtle, where they are to be kept in the roome or roomes which were formerly uſed for that purpoſe, to the end the ſame may be made uſe of as there ſhall be occaſion, in order to the doeing of right juſtice to the people of that nation; and it was referred to the Maſter of the Rolls, Sir Archibald Johnſton, Lord Wareſton, Gabriel Berk, and William Ryley, Eſquires, or any three of them, to take care that ſuch of the records, writings, and regiſters of Scotland, remayning in the Tower as aforeſaid, as concern private mens caſes and intereſts only, be ſeparated from thoſe of a publique nature; to the intent thoſe that are of a private nature may be ſent into Scotland accordingly.

And by a later order of the 13th of Auguſt laſt, Sir John Barkſtead, knight, lieutenant of the Tower of London, George Downing, and Nathaniel Taylor, Eſquires, were added to the ſaid committee. Upon conſideration of a report from Sir Archibald Johnſton, Sir John Barkſtead, Nathaniel Taylor, and Gabriel Berk, repreſenting, That in purſuance of the ſaid orders, they have ſevered and ſet apart decreet books before the lords of the ſeſſion, contract books, general regiſter books of ſeaſins, particular books of ſeaſins, books of entries of hornings, books of compriſements of lands for debt, books of ſuſpenſion, books of entry of ſignatures for the conveyance of lands, books of entry, or records of charters in parchment for conveyance of lands, regiſter books of caution and conſignation, minute-books, being a calendar of decreets, contracts, &c. books of entry of acts of the lords of ſeſſion, books of Lawburrowes, being ſecurityes in the nature of good behaviour, books of lawſings of arreſtments, being of the nature of attachments of goods for debt, books of the valuation of kirks, and miniſters ſtipends, which they conceive conteyne onely the recordings or entryes of contracts, bonds, rights, and conveyances of lands and proceedings in law between party and party before the lords of the ſeſſion in Scotland, being the prime judicature of all civil cauſes there; and that they have cauſed by way of inventory, the day and year of the beginning and ending of every of the ſaid books of entry to be entered in a book, and a duplicate thereof to be made, to the end the ſame may be atteſted in ſuch manner as the councell ſhall direct; that ſo one of them may be kept here, and the other ſent into Scotland, to be kept with the ſaid books of entry, in caſe the council ſhall approve thereof, and ſhall order the ſaid books to be ſent thither. Ordered by his highneſs the lord protector and the councell, That the ſaid books before ſpecified, ſo ſevered and ſet apart by the ſaid committee, be ſent into Scotland, and delivered into the caſtle of Edinburgh, to the proper officer there for keeping the ſaid records, according to the ſaid former order of 23d of July laſt; and that in order thereunto the lord Wareſton doe ſigne the booke wherein the entry of the day and yeare of the beginning and ending of the ſaid books ſo to be ſent is entered, which is to remain here amongſt the records in the Tower of London, and the other book, or duplicate thereof, being firſt ſigned by three of the ſaid referees, togeather with the ſaid books before ſpecified, the ſaid William Ryley is hereby authorized and required to deliver into the hands of the ſaid Sir Archibald Johnſton, to be ſent into Scotland in ſuch ſhip as the commiſſioners for the admiralty and navy ſhall appoint to carry the ſame, to be ſafely delivered into the caſtle of Edenburgh according to the ſaid order.

Ordered by his highneſs the lord protector and the councell, That the commiſſioners for the admiralty and navy are hereby authorized and required to appoint a fit ſhip to receive and to carry into Scotland the books and records ordered to be ſent thither from the Tower of London.

In purſuance of the before-mentioned reſolutions of the commons, and order of council, an INVENTORY of the ſaid records was drawn out, by which it appeared that they conſiſted of,

After relation of the ſubtle practiſes of biſhops, and of their incroaching all eccleſiaſticke and civill power, and of his majeſtie's condiſcenſion for the convening of a parliment by the articles of pacification anno 1639, for remedy, and of Traquair's unjuſt prorogation thereof, and of their honeſt intentions in the continuation of the ſame, they profeſſe themſelves bound to provide for the ſafety of the common wealth and their owne, and proteſt that the defending the acts of the preſent parliament is the moſt neceſſary remedy of bygone and preſent evills, and for that end ordaine the forme of a ſubſcription for defence of the ſaid preſent parliament to be generally taken by men of all rankes.

ACT LIX.

Fol. 55. b. Act continuing the parliament to the 19th of November next, viz.

The eſtates of parliament haveing reſolved to ſett an end to this ſeſſion of parliament, prorogue it to the 19th of November next. Declare all the acts thereof to have the force of lawes, and that they be publiſhed in print. All the acts were ſubſcrived by Robert lord Burghe, preſident of the parliament, in preſence of the eſtates of parliament.

ACT LX.

Fol. 56. a. Declaration and cloiſure of the parliament.

The king's majeſtie's ſubjects convened in parliament profeſſe, it hath been their care to keep themſelves within the bounds of moderation as much as if they had been honoured with his majeſtie's perſonal preſence; and that they have enacted nothing but the ratification of the conſtitutions of the late aſſembly, &c. and that when his majeſtie ſhall pleaſe to command theſe acts to be publiſhed in his owne name, Lowdon returned in ſafety, Edinburgh caſtle ſurrendered to their uſe, Scotch men be free of cenſure for ſubſcriving the covenant, their malevolents be brought to tryall, &c. then theſe proofes of your

your majeſtie's juſtice and goodneſs will be ſtrong bands to tye their hearts that curſe all rebellion and treaſon to hell where it is hatched.

14. If the parliament of England ſhal be very ſparing of their anſweres to the queries as the 17th and 23d propoſition, you ſhall teſtifie our thoughts thereanent, and advertiſe the committees of eſtates before ye and they differ.
15. If you ſhall come to the propoſition of diſbanding the armyes, you ſhall acquaint the committees and the lord generall. The like anent the propoſition of ceſſation of armyes.
16. Commiſſioners are to include under the name of England in articles obligatory of them to us.
17. To make propoſition for reſtoring thoſe who have been putt out of places for adhering to the cauſe.
18. To be carefull and to endeavour to ſettle with the kingdome of England the number and quality of Scots to be kept about the king and prince.

19. In caſe of diviſion in England you ſhall take care to prevent or remove them, that falling out to be impoſſible, you ſhall countenance them that are firmeſt to the covenant, &c.
20. If the parliament of England deſire the Scotch army about Yorke to march further ſouth, it is remitted to the lord generall to doe what he thinks beſt.
21. To endeauour the continuance of the committees of bothe kingdomes, acknowledging the uſefulneſs of ſuch conjunction of councills and armes, and our reſentment of the parliament of England's kindneſſe therein.
22. To procure the approbation of the earle of Kallendar's forces towards Newcaſtle, and to move for their good entertaynment.
23. To take care in manageing the warr, performing their inſtructions and ſetling of peace, not to remitt the ſetling of the kingdomes in peace upon circumſtantiall differences. In difficultyes requiring adviſe out of Scotland, to ſend downe one of their number.
24. If any thing be proponed contrary to their inſtructions, agree not thereto, but acquaint the parliament and their committees, and follow their directions.

To propound whither it be expedient as things ſtand to invite his majeſtie to returne to his parliament.

Inſtructions added by the eſtates of parliament to the former inſtructions already given to the commiſſioners that goe to London.

10 Feb. 1645.

The generall aſſemblie's petition to the parliament, with the order of parliament for recording thereof, and anſwer thereto.

The effect of their petition is, That the barbarous Iriſh, and there owne treacherous countrymen joyned with them, doe encreaſe, to the danger of kirke and kingdome; therefore they appoint a ſolemne faſt; and that they are to helpe the Lord againſt the mighty, which being delayed, the inteſtine enemy is ſtrengthened, the harts of our friends faint, and wee cannot reach helpe to thoſe that wreſtle for the worke of reformation. May it pleaſe your honors, therefore, to take a ſpeedy courſe of juſtice againſt the bloody enemyes, &c. Whereupon the eſtates of parliament ordein it to be recorded, and declare that their proceedings ſhall give a ſatisfactory anſwer to the points thereof.

11 Feb. 1645.

Decreit of forfalter againſt the earles of Montroſſe, Nithiſdale, and others, for the invaſion in the ſouth.

In a ſummonds of treaſon and forfalter againſt the earle of Montroſſe, upon ſeveral acts there recited, making it treaſon to do that he and others there named had done, hee and they are charged,

Firſt, That he and thoſe others joyned themſelves without conſent of the parliament of Scotland, and were in armes with the marqueſſe of Newcaſtle, leader of an army in England, againſt the kingdome, ſubjects, and parliament of England, and againſt the Scottiſh army ſent out of this kingdome by the eſtates thereof for the &c. for the crymes and factis above written, and to have heard or ſeen themſelves declared by the eſtates of parliament to be guilty of the ſaid crymes, and to have incurred the payne of high treaſon, &c. with certification to the diſobeyors, that if they compere not, the eſtates of parliament would then inſtantly proceed againſt the ſaid defenders as rebells and traytors; and that their abſence ſhould be enough, and that there ſhould need no farther probation; but if they compeired they ſhould be proceeded againſt upon lawfull probation. The ſaid defenders were three ſeverall tymes publickly called at the parliament-houſe doore, and they appeared not to anſwer, nor none for them, whereupon Mr. Thomas Nicolſone aſkit inſtruments. The eſtates of parliament appoint a committee of their owne number to conſider of the probation of the foreſaid ſommonds, before whom there compeired his majeſtie's advocate, and the procurators of the eſtates of this kingdome: They charge the earle of Montroſſe, that hee made an ordinance att Forfar the 9th day of Febr. 1644, that all trew ſubjects between ſixtie and ſixteen ſhould repaire to his army with their beſt armes, under payne of burning and ſlaying all diſobedient perſones. And the earle of Montroſſe, &c. were called att the doores of the parliament-houſe, to have compeired before the ſaid committee, to have heard, &c. and compeired not, whereupon one of the procurators of the eſtates aſkit inſtruments. The committee, after receiveing the depoſitions of ſundry witneſſes for proveing the pointz of the ſaid ſommonds againſt the defenders above written, made their report, which being read in audience of parliament, the eſtates of parliament declared that they will only att this tyme conſider the ſaid report as to the ſaid James earle of Montroſſe. And therefore the ſaid James earle of Montroſſe, &c. being publickly called three ſeverall tymes in audience of the parliament, &c. to have heard and ſeen ſentence pronounced againſt them conforme to the ſaid report and ſommonds, they compered not, nor none to anſwer for them. Whereupon the eſtates of parliament having adviſed upon the foreſaid report and ſommonds, they find the propoſition of the ſaid ſommonds relievant againſt the perſones now inſiſted againſt to inferr the payne and puniſhment of treaſon; and moſt of the heads of the charge layd in the ſommonds are recited again, and found againſt them ſufficiently proved; and find them to be guilty of the cryme of treaſon. And they find the member of the ſaid aſſumption founded upon the ſaid David Graham of Gorthie his takeing up of armes againſt the kingdome and eſtates of the country with the ſaid earle of Montroſſe, and with Alexander Macdonald and the Iriſh rebells; and his being preſent at the conflict of Aberdene, and his being commiſſair to the rebells army, ſufficiently proven to infer the payne and puniſhment of treaſon; thairfore the eſtates of parliament pronounceth thair ſentence of forfalter againſt them in manner above written and as followes. The eſtates finds, decerns, and declares, that the ſaid James earle of Montroſſe, &c. has incurred the pain and puniſhment of treaſon, that is, forfalter of their lives, &c. and declares them traytors to the eſtates of this kingdome, &c. and ordaines the Lyon king att armes to ryve out of the booke of armes, in face of parliament, and att the croſſe of Edinburgh, efter ſound of trumpett, their armes. Which ſentence of forfalter being read in parliament, was pronounced for law againſt them by the dempſter of parliament. Whereuppon the ſaid Mr. Thomas Nicolſone, procurator, &c. aſkit inſtruments.

Anſwer of the parliament to the papers given in by the Engliſh commiſſioners.

Their papers were concerning protections to delinquents. The eſtates of parliament for the tyme to come thinke it juſt that protections to delinquents ſhould be limited to the reſtrayning of ſoldiers from acts of violence, not to extend to protections of them from juſtice, except capitulations upon ſurrender of places. They agree to another paper for the adjuſting of accompts; to another paper they agree to the regulating, recruiting, or reforming of their army; as for the moſs troopers, they have given order for the puniſhing of them and their recetters in relief of the borderers of Northumberland, &c.

Inſtructions from the parliament of Scoland to their commiſſioners att London.

The houſes of parliament demand the removall of the Scotiſh forces out of the townes and caſtles of Carliſle, &c. Hereupon the parliament of Scotland ſend nine inſtructions, as that they are ſo neceſſary that they cannot goe on in the ſervice without them; that the Scots recovered theſe garriſons from the enemy; they will give ſecurity for reſtitution of them after the warre is ended; that they will be content to retayne Berwick, Carliſle, and Tinmouth; that the garriſons ſhall be reſtored when they are payd the ſomms of money due to them, &c. The points of the treaty debated at Uxbridge they are to deſire may be ſent to his majeſtie, which were for ſetling religion, the militia, and Ireland. They are to endeavour that the 17th propoſition concerning the militia might not be altered; that the militia ought not to be ſetled without the king if hee be willing to doe it with advice of his parliament, to deſire a conjunction of the councells and forces of both kingdomes to promote the ends of the common league and covenant. If the howſes of parliament will alter the 17th propoſition, they are inſtructed to anſwer in that caſe. There commiſſioners were to demand halfe, att leaſt the third part of officers about king, queen, and prince to be Scotchmen, and to demand ſundry great priviledges concerning the number of the cavalrie in Scotland, what anſwer to make, and concerning a garriſon in Ireland called Belfaſt, to deſire it may remayne in the poſſeſſion of the Scots; upon reading, the eſtates of parliament approve theſe inſtructions.

15th March 1647.

Anſwer of parliament to the papers given in by the Engliſh commiſſioners.

That the ſame deſire given in to the Scots commiſſioners att London, they gave their reaſons againſt it, which have not yett been anſwered by the parliament of England. Monro ſecured that place, or elſe it would have been in the power of the enemy. The Scots cannot doe the ſervice without that place. It is hard to preſſe a garriſon ſoe neceſſary for their ſafety, ſince they have been at ſo vaſt expence for ſupplieing the Engliſh army, they hope the parliament of England will not miſtruſt the Scots army, ſoe long as they are imployed in their ſervice in Ireland; yett they will render it, and all other garriſons, upon their arrears payd, and diſmiſſion according to the treaty; and therefore deſire a meeting, either for maintenance of their army in Ireland, or ſatisfying their arreares.

17th March 1647.

Recommendation of the duke of Hamiltone and earle of Roxburt.

The eſtates of parliament ordaine a letter to be writt to the houſes of parliament of England, for reſtoration of the duke's goods, pictures, and moveables intromitted with by their order. The like letter writt by them in the earle of Roxburt's behalf, for the like reſtoration.

19th March 1647.

Inſtructions from the parliament to their commiſſioners att London, and to the earle of Lawderdaill, who is to repaire to London to the commiſſioners already there, in manner and in effect following:

1. To endeavour with the houſes of parliament of England, that religion and uniformity may be ſetled according to the covenant, and by the adviſe of the aſſembly of divines to eſtabliſh what is already agreed, and to profitt the remanent, according to the Scots paper of 24th December 1646; particularly that the ſolemne league and covenant be enjoyned upon payne to be taken by all the ſubjects; non-covenanters to be in no place of publique truſt.
2. To joyne with the parliament of England's commiſſioners in deſireing the king's aſſent to the propoſitions of peace; eſpecially that his majeſtie may ſweare and ſubſcribe the ſolemne league and covenant; at leaſt give his conſent that it may be confirmed as a law: To deſire his majeſtie's aſſent to the ſale of biſhops lands, they being aſſigned by the treaty betwixt the kingdomes to defray moneys due to Scotland by the parliament of England, particularly for the ready payment of the laſt 200,000 l.
3. If the king give his aſſent, they are to agree to a peace, and to deſire his majeſtie's return to his houſe of parliament, and exerciſe of his royall function, and to joyne in an invitation for the prince his returne, and to ſend a ſpeedy account to the eſtates of parliament.
4. If his majeſtie delay or deny his aſſent, preſently to advertiſe the eſtates of parliament, and to labour againſt reſolutions to his majeſtie's diſadvantage in the interim, and to preſſe a declaration from both houſes like that of the 16th of January laſt.

5. That this kingdome reſolves to preſerve the union betwixt the two kingdomes, according to the covenant and treatyes, and to endeavour a right underſtanding and conjunction between them.
6. To deſire that Scotchmen that have charge about the king, may, unleſſe excepted in the propoſitions of peace, attend the ſame; and that none be debarred that hath warrant from the parliament of Scotland.
7. To deſire the houſes of parliament to aſſiſt us for repreſſing rebells according to the kingdome of England's obligation by the large treaty; to deſire a ſupply of money to enable us to pay the forces in Ireland, for the proportion to deſire according to an other warrant directed to them by order of parliament.
8. To deſire the houſes either to provide ſhips to guard our eaſt coaſts, or to allow this kingdome ſome money to provide for itſelfe.
9. To deſire the Scotts army in Ireland may be ſupplyed with money, armes, and ammunition, or be payed their arreares according to the treaty, and diſmiſſed.
10. To deſire that the warrs may be actively proſecuted againſt the Iriſh rebells, that the Iriſh may not invade Scotland.
11. To delict the earle of Traquair's name out of the number of thoſe that are excepted in the propoſitions of peace, becauſe he is reconciled to the parliament of this kingdome.
12. To delict out of the firſt exception of the propoſitions the lord Hereis, lord Ogilbie, earl of Forth, lord Ythan, and . . . . . . Irwing of Down, and Alexander Leſlie, and intimate the ſame to the parliament of England.
13. To proſecute further inſtructions that ſhal be given you by the committee of eſtates.
14. Frequently to advertiſe the committee of eſtates of your proceedings, and when they ſhall think fitt, to ſend them one of your number for that purpoſe.
15. To endeavour a juſt peace if the king grant the propoſitions for religion and uniformity, and a ſatisfactory anſwer in the propoſitions for matters civill, ſo far as may be a foundation of a firme peace.
16. You ſhall aſſent if the parliament of England make alterations on the propoſitions in any thing that ſingly concernes themſelves.

17. To deale with the houſes of parliament for reſtitution of the earle of Roxburgh's goods intromitted with by their warrant.

Additionall inſtructions for the earl of Lawderdaill.

1. To goe to London ſpeedily, and join with the reſt of the commiſſioners there, to manage the former inſtructions of the parliament, or thoſe ſhal be given by the committee of eſtates.
2. To goe to Holdenby, or where the king is, and take with yon any of the commiſſioners att London, and joyne with the commiſſioners from the parliament of England.
3. To deliver the letters ſent from the parliament to the parliament of England, maior and citty of London, and aſſembly of divines there.
4. To deale with the houſes of parliament for the reſtitution of the duke of Hamilton's goods intromitted with by them or their committee's warrant.

20th March 1647.

Qualifications of the power granted be the parliament to the committee of eſtates, and to the commander of their forces, anent the pardoning ſuch as are in rebellion, and anent ſuch as are not to be pardoned, nor reſave conditions.

1. James Graham,
Allaſter Macdonald,
James Gordoun, ſometymes lord Aboyne,
George Gordoun, ſometymes marquis of Huntley,
Lodowick Lyndſey, ſometymes earle of Crawfurd,

17 Martii 1648.

Commiſſion to the committee for preventing dangers. To a cloſe and ſecret committee of ſix of every eſtate, commiſſioners nominated are, the duke of Hamilton, the marquiſs of Argyle, the earles of Crawford, Lawderdaill, Lanerk, and Kallendar, &c. The commiſſion is, to prevent any danger that may come to this kingdome by the garriſoning of Berwicke or Carliſle by the malignants, ſectaries, or others.

27 Martii 1648.

Anſwer of parliament to the deſires of the commiſſioners of the generall aſſembly, repreſented by them to the parliament.

1. The eſtates of parliament, for anſwer to the firſt deſire of the commiſſioners of the generall aſſembly, bearand, that the grounds and cauſes for undertaking of warr may be cleared to be ſo juſt, as that all who are well affected may be ſatiſfied in the lawfullneſs and neceſſity of the ingagement; and that nothing be acted in reference to a warr, and the ſtate of the queſtion be agreed upon. Anſwer by a repetition of the ſame words, declaring that it ſhall be ſo, concluding with ſome difference, viz. that they wil be very carefull that nothing be acted in reference to a warre dureing the conference, and untill the ſame be reported to the parliament.

2. Item, for anſwer to the ſecond deſire, bearand, That as the ſectaries in England have evidently broke the covenant, ſo wee deſyre, that according to the treatyes, the parliament would declare what be thoſe breaches of peace that they take to be a ground of warre, that reparations thereof may be ſought. The eſtates of parliament thinkes fitt that the breaches of covenant bee repreſented, and reparation ſought, and appoints a committee to conſider of the tyme and manner.
3. Item, For anſwer to the third deſire, bearand, That there may be no ſuch quarrell as may breake the union betwixt the kingdomes, or diſoblige the preſbyterian party in England, who adhere firmly to the ſolemne league and covenant. The eſtates of parliament declare, that any engagement they ſhall enter into, ſhall be to ſtrengthen the union, and to encourage the preſbyterians in England.
4. Item, to the fourth deſire, viz. That the nation and army, if the papiſh, prelaticall, or malignant party riſe againe, may not joyne with them, but ſuppreſſe them as enemyes to the cauſe and covenant on one hand, as ſectaryes are on the other. The eſtates of parliament agree to the ſubſtance, and remitt it to thoſe that are to be at the conference for explaining the ſame.
5. To the fift deſire, viz. That as the king's conceſſions about religion have been by the church declared unſatisfactory, they might bee ſoe declared likewiſe by the parliament. The eſtates of parliament declare, that upon agreement of the whole matter, they will declare his majeſtie's conceſſions concerning religion unſatisfactory.
6. Item, To the ſixt deſire, viz. That the parliament may ſetle upon no other ſtate of a queſtion for ſecurity to be had from his majeſtie but by his ſolemne oath under his hande and ſeale, for himſelfe and his ſucceſſours to agree to acts of parliament injoyning the league and covenant, and eſtabliſhing preſbyteriall government, &c. in all his majeſtie's dominions, before his reſtitution to royall power, becauſe religion cannot be otherwiſe ſecured. The eſtates of parliament agree fully hereunto; and as to the laſt clauſe, anent his reſtitution to regall power, they remitt it to the conference to find out a ſmoother expreſſion.
7. Item, To the ſeventh deſire, to witt, That the parliament entruſt none to be of their committees or armies, to the end religion and all the other ends of the covenant may be ſecured, but only per-ſons of approved faithfulnes in this cauſe, and againſt whome there can be noe exception; the eſtates of parliament fully agree to this deſire.

8. Item, To the eight deſire, the eſtates of parliament declares, that both in the grounds of their ingagement, and in an oath that ſhall be ſubjoined, the church ſhall have their due intereſt; and deſires the commiſſioners of the church to meet with the committee of parliament for a conference, and for ſuch a ſtating of a queſtion as may tend to reformation and defence of religion, ſafety of the king and his poſterity, and guid of this kingdome.

29 Martii 1648.

Anſwer of parliament to the repreſentation of the commiſſion of the generall aſſembly of their ſence on the parliament's anſwer to their eight deſires.

The eſtates of parliament ordaines a committee of 24 to conferr with the commiſſioners of the church upon the paper exhibited be the church, and anſwer given thereto be the parliament in the eight articles laſt above-written.

Primo Aprilis 1648.

Anſwer to the Engliſh commiſſioners paper this day read.

The eſtates of parliament remitt it to a committee that are to conſider of this and other papers given in by the Engliſh commiſſioners; and they will anſwer the ſaid papers ſometyme next weeke.

8 April 1648.

Anſwer to the Engliſh commiſſioners.

That the eſtates of parliament will returne anſwer to their papers at the beginning of the next weeke.

11 Aprilis 1648.

Act anent the reſolutions of parliament concerning the breaches of the covenant and treatyes betwixt the kingdomes of Scotland and England; and demands reparation thereof.

The eſtates of parliament finds, that England doth not mayntaine the forces of Scotland that are in Ireland for ſubdueing the Iriſh rebells againſt ſubjects to the crowne of England, whome by the large treaty, England is obliged to ſuppreſſe.

Item, The eſtates finds that reformation, which by the covenant ought to be indeavoured, is reſiſted; the ſectaries in the army have diſobeyed, and threatned the houſes of parliament, marched up hoſtilely againſt them, impriſoned faithfull members, and placed a garriſon in Whitehall; ſeized violently on the king, and carryed him away againſt his will, and the reſolutions of both kingdomes; kept him under ſtrong guards, and now they have committed him cloſe priſoner, and voted it high treaſon to make further application to him; the ſectaryes that have done theſe things are protected; all the articles of the league and covenant have been violated by them.

The firſt article of the treaty is broken; for though it were ordained that all ſhould take the league and covenant, yet divers of eminent truſts both in the army and country have not taken it, nor been urged thereunto.

The eighth article of the treatie is violated by ſending propoſitions to the king without the conſent of Scotland, yea, contrary to their commiſſioners expreſſe declaration; and whereas this eighth article by the houſes expreſſe letter, was agreed to be obſerved after our armyes removall out of England; in the parliament's late declaration they affirme it is to bee obſerved only dureing the warre.

That the earle of Lawderdail, a publique miniſter haveing warrant from the parliament of this kingdome, was debarred acceſſe to the king, contrary to the ingagement of the houſes, 27 Jan. 1647.

That upon the commiſſioners of Scotland's deſire to know whither the votes againſt any application to the king did extend to his majeſtie's ſubjects of Scotland, they could receive noe anſwer; but in March laſt the parliaments commiſſioners gave in a declaration clayming the ſole diſpoſall of the perſon of the king of England.

That theſe breaches manifeſt that this kingdome cannot expect ſecurity from theſe ſectaryes that have deſtroyed religion, liberty, and covenant in England; and wee are like them that dwell neare a houſe ſett on fire or family infected, and may feare the ſpreading of this gangrene.

Therefore the eſtates of parliament thinkes fitt to deſire theſe reparations of the houſes of parliament of England.

1. That the covenant be generally taken in England. That uniformity in religion might be ſettled, and the directory of worſhip practiſed in England and Ireland. That the confeſſion of faith of the aſſembly of divines at Weſtminſter be approved.

That

That preſbytery be ſetled in England and Ireland. That all hereſies and the booke of Common Prayer be ſuppreſſed.

2. That his majeſtie may come with honor, freedome, and ſafety to ſome of his houſes in or near London. That the parliaments of both kingdomes may apply to him for his aſſent to the ſetling of religion, and of a well-grounded peace.

3. To theſe ends it is deſyred by the eſtates of parliament, that Sir Thomas Fairfax's ſectarian army may be diſbanded, and none but covenanters to be of the army, except certaine garriſons to be kept up by the parliament for their ſecurity to be commanded by covenanters.

12 April 1648.

Anſwer of parliament to the Engliſh commiſſioners papers.

The eſtates of parliament for their part will keepe the union to which both kingdomes are ingaged by covenant and treaties; and yet their deſires by their commiſſioners concerning religion, the king's majeſtie, and the intereſt of this kyngdome, have had no ſatisfactory anſwer from the parliament of England. To the deſire of the Engliſh for the delivery up of captaine Wogan, Sir Philip Muſgrave, and Sir Thomas Glenholme according to the act of pacification, for bearing armes againſt England; the eſtates of parliament anſwer, that the act extends only to ſuch Engliſh as have incenſed the king of Scotland againſt the kingdome of England.

The eſtates of parliament give warrant to the committee of 24 to deliver to the Engliſh commiſſioners the anſwer this day paſt in parliament, and to appoint ſome of their number to meet with them, and to aſſert and to report what the commiſſioners of the houſes ſhall offer to the conſideration of the parliament.

15 Aprill 1648.

Act concerning the deſires of the commiſſioners of the generall aſſembly.

The eſtates of parliament declare, that before any engagement in a warre, they will cleare the neceſſity and lawfulneſs thereof, ſetling truth and peace under his majeſtie's government.

The parliament reſolves, in a juſt way, to demand reparation of breaches of covenant and treatyes by the ſectaries in England; and reſolve for their part not to breake the union betwixt the kingdomes, nor to diſoblige the preſbyterians in England, who continue firme to the league and covenant; and declare, if the Popiſh prelaticall or malignant party riſe againe in armes, they will indeavour to ſuppreſſe them, they being enemyes to the cauſe and covenant as well as the ſectaries are.

In regard the king's conceſſions about religion are not ſatisfactory, and that our undertakings have been to ſee religion in the firſt place ſetled; and as wee ſhall indeavour the reſcueing of the king, and that hee may come with honor, freedome, and ſafety to ſome of his houſes in or about London, that wee may apply to him for ſetling religion, and a well-grounded peace, ſoe wee reſolve to give the king no ſuch power, whereby the aforeſaid ends of the covenant may be oppoſed, Religion or preſbyterian government endangered; but before any agreement be made, his majeſtie is to give aſſurance by oath under his hand and ſeal, that he ſhall aſſent to acts of parliament for injoyning the league and covenant, and eſtabliſhing preſbyterian government, for the directory of worſhip, and the confeſſion of faith in all his dominions.

If warre ſhall be made, it ſhall be upon juſt grounds, and wee ſhall give truſt in armies and committees, only to ſuch as ſhall be faithfull to this cauſe, and that are without exception.

There ſhall be an oath ſubjoyned to the grounds of the parliament's undertakings, in framing, that the church ſhall have their due intereſt.

And in regard of the preſent condition of affaires, they ordaine this kingdome to be preſently putt in a poſture of defence.

18 Aprill 1648.

Act of poſture anent the putting of the kingdome in a poſture of warre for defence.

For theſe ends the eſtates of parliament appoynt and nominate who ſhall be their collonells of horſe and foot within their ſeveral ſheriffdomes.

19 Aprill 1648.

A declaration of the parliament of Scotland to his majeſtie's good ſubjects of this kingdome, concerning their reſolutions for religion, king and kingdomes, in purſuance of the ends of the covenant.

This kingdome for the ſpace of near two years offered their endeavours to compoſe differences betwixt the king and his two houſes of parliament, but this tooke no effect, and either ſide fell by an unnaturall ſword.

Hereupon the houſes, then in a very low condition, invited this kingdome to their aſſiſtance, and finding their addreſſes to his majeſty for a more naturall compoſure of differences, rejected by the ſword, did engage in a ſolemne league and covenant for defence of religion, honour of the king, and ſafety of the three kingdomes, and joyned in armes with their brethren in England; and after the ſubdueing of the common enemyes, their army returned home with aſſurance from the two houſes that the treatyes and covenant ſhould be kept; but to the contrary, wee find them broken by the ſectaryes of England, and the league and covenant layed aſide in the new propoſitions lately ſent to his majeſty to the Iſle of Wight, and not taken in the country, nor by ſundry perſons in eminent truſts, nor they urged thereunto; reformation of religion hindered, hereſy and ſchiſme tollerated, the houſes of parliament diſobeyed and threatned, offenders, that by the league and covenant ought to have been brought to tryall, are protected, and thoſe proſecuted that by the covenant ought to be defended; the union broken. And whereas both kingdomes by the ſolemne league and covenant are obliged to preſerve his majeſty's perſon and authority, his majeſty was violently ſeiſed on, carryed from place to place under guards, till he was forced for ſafety of his life, to fly from Hampton Court; and votes paſſed, declareing it treaſon to make any application to him, or receive any meſſage from him, &c. as in the 11th of Aprill before.

Anſwer of the parliament to the deſires given into them be the commiſſioners of the generall aſſembly, and the papers given in by them upon the 13th and 18th dayes of this moneth.

> FORASMUCH as the late king is removed by a violent death, and that there is left a lawfull ſucceſſor, CHARLES prince of Scotland and Wales, &c. now king of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland, Wee the eſtates of parliament of the kingdome of Scotland, Wee therefore doe hereby proclaime to all the world, That the ſaid prince CHARLES is king of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland, &c. And becauſe his majeſty is bound by the fundamentall lawes of this kingdome to rule in righteouſneſſe and equity, for the honour of God, the good of religion, and the wealth of his people, it is therefore declared, that before his exerciſe of his royall dignity he ſhall give ſatisfaction for his ſecurity of religion, the union betwixt the kingdomes, and the peace of this kingdome, according to the nationall covenant, and the ſolemne league and covenant; for which end wee are reſolved to make our ſpeedy and humble addreſſe to his majeſty. And in witneſs hereof, we the parliament of Scotland publiſh this our acknowledgement of his right and ſucceſſion to the crowne of theſe kingdomes, ſolemnely att the Mercate croſſe of Edinburgh; and ordaine his name and ſeale to be uſed in the judicatores, and his portrait in the mynthouſe of the kingdome; and command this act to be proclaimed and printed.

Followes the tenor of the inſtruments taken be his majeſtie's advocate upon the proclamation of the above-written proclamation upon the croſſe of Edinburgh, on the 5th day of February 1649, at twelve houres in the day, or thereby.

10 Martii 1649.

Letter from the parliament of Scotland to William Lenthall, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons of the parliament of England.

> The parliament of Scotland ſignifies to him, that they owne the paper of the 24th of Feb. laſt, given in by their commiſſioners, as agreeable to their inſtructions, wherein wee give teſtimony againſt theſe things which wee conceive to be contrary to the grounds and bounds ſo often declared by both kingdomes. And as their proteſtations in the former ſeſſion of parliament againſt the late unlawfull engagement, and our proceedings before and ſince, are evidences of our reſolutions to continue the union betwixt the kingdomes, according to the covenant and treatyes, ſoe it is farr from our intentions to aſſume any power over the lawes and government of England, &c. which cannot be inferred from the ſaid power.

They hope none can juſtly blame them for continuing conſtant to their principles, which the houſes of parliament of England profeſſed alſo to be theirs, when they induced the kingdome of Scotland to enter into ſo ſolemne a league and covenant.

Therefore they deſire their commiſſioners may be freed from reſtraint, their freedome being inviolable even amongſt heathen kingdomes and ſtates.

Inſtructions from the parliament to the commiſſioners goeing to the king's majeſtie.

1. That the parliament ſend their commiſſioners to treate with his majeſtie, not upon his letter, but in proſecution of their former deſires.
2. To deſire his majeſtie to recall commiſſions prejudiciall to the covenant or kingdome, and to null all treatyes with the rebells in Ireland, and to declare not to tolerate popery in Ireland, or other his dominions.
3. To deſire the king's approbation of this and the former parliaments, &c.
4. To preſſe the motives contayned in the 11th article of the former inſtructions, March 1649, upon the ſtraits the kingdome may be putt to after there ſo many ineffectuall addreſſes to his majeſtie.
5. To deſire the king's oath, ſubſcription, and ſeale, before his admiſſion to the exerciſe of royall power, to the nationall covenant, and the ſolemne league and covenant, in the words following:

> I Charles king of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland, doe aſſure and declare by my ſolemne oath, in the preſence of Almighty God, the ſearcher of hearts, my allowance and approbation of the nationall covenant, and of the ſolemne league and covenant above written, and faithfully doe oblige myſelfe to proſecute the ends thereof in my ſtation and calling; and that I, for myſelf and ſucceſſors, ſhall conſent and agree to all acts of parliament injoin-ing the ſame nationall covenant and the ſolemne league and covenant, and fully eſtabliſhing preſbyteriall government, the directory of worſhipp, confeſſion of faith, and catechiſmes in the kingdome of Scotland, as they are approvin by the generall aſſembly of this kirke, and parliament of this kingdome; and that I ſhall give my royall aſſent to acts of parliament enjoyning the ſame in the reſt of my dominions; and that I ſhall obſerve theſe in my awne practiſe and family, and ſhall never make oppoſition to any of theſe, or indeavour any change thereof.

6. To acquaint the king with his oath at his coronation, and to deſire him that civill matters may be determined by this and ſubſequent parliaments, eccleſiaſticall by the enſuing aſſemblyes of this kirke.
7. They are to invite his majeſtie to come to Scotland, and to aſſure him hee ſhall have dutifull entertaynment from his loyall ſubjects there, and exerciſe his royall power, if hee ſhall grant the deſires of the ſecond, third, and ſixt articles, and ſhall promiſe in verbo Principis, att his comeing to Scotland, to ſatisfie the laſt article; and ſhall deliver them under his hand and ſeale the aſſurance foreſaid, directed to the parliament.
8. To explaine the oath to the king, that is to ſay, that it imports the takeing of the nationall and ſolemne league and covenant by his ſubjects, and the approveing the heads thereof in his owne judgement.
9. To deſire the king, if hee bee reſolved upon theſe grounds to come to Scotland, to be pleaſed to leave all theſe perſons who were excluded by the propoſition of both kingdomes, and in civill matters to follow the counſell of his parliament, and in eccleſiaſticall the councell of the generall aſſembly.
10. To keep good correſpondency with the commiſſioners of the church, according to their former inſtructions.
11. To obſerve good correſpondency with the Engliſh preſbyterians, and to incourage them to be conſtant in the covenant.
12. After meeting with the king the treaty to laſt but thirty dayes, and to continue tenn dayes longer if need require.

Ane letter of creditt given to the commiſſioners.

Paper from the lieutenant-general, 21ſt June 1650. Read in parliament.

BEING neceſſitated to be abſent from your lordſhipps, being about your reſolutions anent the kingdome's defence, I humbly crave leave to preſſe theſe following deſires:

1. That the danger being ſoe iminent, noe fewer horſe and foot nor is expreſt in the laſt act of leavy, be preſently raiſed out of the ſhires for the kingdome's defence.
2. Four reaſons are expreſſed againſt a preſent modelling or reducing of the army now in their lordſhipps ſervice.
3. That your lordſhipps would have a ſpeciall care in the ordering of your army, that the old troopes and regiments may by your new leavyes be compleated to 75 each troop, and 108 each regiment of foot, a mixture being better than to keep the new entirely by themſelves.
4. That t[illegible] remainder of the new leavies, above the compleating of [illegible] of horſe and foot above written, be formed in troopes [illegible] and by your lordſhipps election of your officers, you you may encourage the ſhires chearfully to putt out their ſeverall proportions.

5. That a regular and a ſpeedy courſe be taken for purging your army of all diſaffected and prophane perſons.

Theſe my humble deſires proceed meerly from my affection to your ſervice, wherein I ſhall hazard life and fortune for the common cauſe, and againſt the invaſion of whatſoever.

Warrand of the letter ſent from the Parliament of Scotland to the Lord Fairfax or lord generall Cromwell, 21ſt June 1650.

MY LORD,

THE eſtates of parliament of this kingdome haveing intelligence of the marching of your forces towards their borders, and being informed that Engliſh ſhipps have ſeized on ſome ſhipps, with the perſons and goods belonging to this kingdome; and conſidering that the large treaty requires three moneths warning before denouncing warre, they have writt to Mr. William Lenthall, Eſquire, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, and ſhew to your Lordſhipp that they reſolve to obſerve that rule, of giveing three moneths warning before any engagement of theſe kingdomes in warre; and they deſire to know if your Lordſhipp and thoſe under your command are reſolved to obſerve the foreſaid rule on your part to us; and that your Lordſhipp would declare unto us whither your march be for defence or offence, whither with intention to keepe within the borders of England, or to come within ours. Haveing cleared their intentions, they deſire to be cleared of yours, being perſwaded God's juſtice will purſue thoſe of either nation by whom an unjuſt invaſion ſhal be made. This being all I have in command from the parliament of this kingdome to ſay, I reſt

DORSO,

For his excellencie the Lord Fairfax, Lord general, lieutenant-general Cromwell, or any other commanding in chieff the Engliſh forces.

Warrand of the letter ſent from the Parliament of Scotland to Sir Arthur Haſlerig, 21ſt June 1650.

Much honnored Sir,

THE eſtates of parliament of this kingdome haveing intelligence that Engliſh ſhipps have ſearched and ſeiſed divers ſhipps, with the perſones and goods therein, belonging to this kingdome, and carryed them into Newcaſtle and Berwicke, where you command; and conſidering how contrary theſe things are (noe injury haveing been offered by the partye) to the act of pacification in the large treaty, which requires, that no ſhipp ſhould ſtopp the trade of the other kingdome without conſent of parliament declaring a breach of peace, &c. and if either parliament denounce warr, that they ſhall give three moneths warning. And they have written to Mr. William Lenthall, Eſq; ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, ſo they have reſolved to write to you, that the ſhipps and goods ſeiſed may be releaſed, and like inconveniences prevented for tyme comeing; to which they expect your anſwer. This is all I have in command from the parliament of this kingdome to ſay, and I reſt

Edgh. 21 June 1650. Your humble ſervant.

For the honorable Sir Arthur Haſelrige, governor of Newcaſtle.

The eſtates of parliament approves the letter above written.

Warrand of the letter ſent from the Parliament of Scotland to William Lenthall, Eſquire, 21ſt June 1650.

THE eſtates of the parliament of this kingdome remembring that they had written a letter unto you upon the 6th of March 1649, which did much concerne the peace of theſe kingdomes; and in another letter, 26th June 1649, they did take notice that they had received no returne to theirs of the 6th of March preceding; and having intelligence of the marching of your forces towards this kingdome, and that your ſhipps had ſearched and ſeized divers ſhipps, with the perſons and goods therein, belonging to this nation; and conſidering how contrary theſe things are (no injury haveing been offered by the partie) to the pacification in the large treatie, which requires that no ſhipp ſhould ſtop the trade of the other kingdome without conſent of parliament declareing a breach of peace; and if wrong be done, upon complaynt to the parliament declaring a breach of peace, reparation ſhould be ſought before it be accounted a breach of peace by the whole kingdome; and the parliament that denounced warre ſhould give three moneths warning. They ſend you duplicates of their papers, to ſhew you that they keepe the ſame principles according to their letter of the 6th of March, and have putt the forces of this kingdome into a readineſs in caſe of invaſion, renewing the acts of poſture and levy which were made the laſt yeare, when they wrote the foreſaid letter of the 6th of March; all they have done being meerly for their defence, which may take away all pretence of neceſſity of the marching of your forces for defence of the borders of England. The parliament being informed of a reſolution in England to ſend an army to invade this kingdome, they deſire to know whither thoſe that have the preſent power doe acknowledge themſelves to be, or will by their anſwer oblige themſelves to obſerve the foreſayd way and order upon their part to us, and declare clerely to us whither their forces march for defence or offence, with intentions to keepe within the borders of England, or to come within ours; which cleare dealing is agreeable to the many bonds paſt between theſe kingdomes, and may prevent many evils that may fall out, where two kingdomes (as here) border, though defence were meerly intended. They deſire to remember you of Jephthah and Iſrael's like meſſage to the Ammonites, 11th Judges 12 and 27. So they are confident that the covenanted God of theſe kingdomes that took order with theſe of this nation who did unlawfully ingage againſt England in anno 1648, ſtill lives and raignes, and will bring ruine on thoſe of either nation that unjuſtly make the invaſion without three months warning, and without obſerving the other rules above written. They deſire an anſwer by this bearer to this and to the incloſed duplicates, and that the ſubjects of this nation, with their ſhips and goods, may be preſently releaſed and diſmiſſed. This being all I have in command to repreſent to you from the parliament of this kingdom, I reſt

Act for a leavie of horſe and foot within this kingdome for their neceſſary defence.

25 Junii 1650.

The eſtates of parliament having conſidered the danger of this kingdome, and that inteſtine and forraine enemyes will take all opertunityes to involve this kingdome in new troubles, and having intelligence of the approach of an army of ſectaryes towards this kingdome, as reſolveing to uſe all peacable wayes for prevention, ſoe they give warning to the ſhires to be in a poſture of defence againſt all invaſion. They declare that they enjoyne the following leavy of horſe and foot allanerley for defence againſt invaſion; therefore they ordaine to be in readineſſe the whole number of horſe, men, and armes, and the foot appoynted to be leavyed by the act of parliament 6 Aug. 1649, and horſe to be in readineſſe according to the act of 28 Feb. 1649; and ordaine the forces foreſaid to be brought to rendevouz, &c. What number ſhal be in troopes and regiments of horſe; the eſtates of parliament will nominate the officers of the army from a collonell to a captaine; the committees of warre to nominate officers inferior to a captaine; and likewiſe to the magiſtrates of burghs to doe the ſame, with a proviſo againſt choice of malignant and unfitt perſons; the committee of warr and counſells of burghs have power to divide the horſe proportionally to be maintained by the ſeverall heritors; the horſe and foot are to be brought to the randevouz by the heritors lyable to putt them forth, upon payne to them that fayle to pay 200 markes for ilk horſe and man, and 100 markes for ilk footman; and in caſe of their returne from the randevouz the heritors to be taken under the paine aforeſaid; hee that takes money to ſpare any heritor ſhal be diſbanded and impriſoned till hee pay the quadruple, except thoſe that are to make leavies of horſemen beyonde Spey, who may take money from the outputters in lieu of the horſemen aforeſaid. The committees of warre, with adviſe of the collonells, are to act for the putting in readineſſe the horſe and foot abovewritten, and to ſitt daily for execution of the ſame, and to returne an account to the parliament of what they have done, with power to fine thoſe of their number for their abſence.

Double act anent the ſecuring of the harbour of Leith.

4 Julii 1650.

Att Edinburgh the fourt day of July 1650 yeires, the eſtates of parliament doe hereby give warrand and command to the magiſtrates of Edinburgh, and committee of fortification of Leith, to take preſent and effectuall courſe for ſecuring the harbour of Leith, and ſhipps, barks, and boats lying therin, and for that effect to caſt up ſuch fortes and workes as they ſhall find expedient for defence of that harbour, to cauſe plant gunns thereupon, to command ſuch nomber of ſoldiers, or others, preſently imployed about the workes of Leith as they thinke fitt, to be ayding and aſſiſting in making up alſo fortes upon the mouth of the harbour of Leith. And that the ſaid magiſtrates and committee give order for putting on the boume upon the mouth of that harbour, and to doe all other things neceſſary for defence thereof. And the ſaid eſtates doe hereby diſcharge all maſters of ſhipps or others from taking any ſhipps or barks furth of the ſaid harbour, without ſpeciall warrand from the committee of eſtaits, or from the provoſt of Edinburgh. Extract.

Act for putting the kingdome in a poſture of defence to joyne with the preſent ſtanding forces and new leavy.

3 Julii 1650.

The eſtates of parliament convened in this fift ſeſſion of this ſecond triennial parliament, conſidering the imminent dangers of this kingdome by likelyhood of invaſion from England; and yett to avoid confuſion by the comeing together of all ſenſible perſones, ordain that every ſhire ſhall have in readineſs in companyes, troops, and regiments, the proportion of foot and horſe as after follows viz.

For the horſe.

Roxburgh, 180; inde. 2 troopes; reſts 30, which being joyned with Selkirke, whoſe proportion is 47, makes 1 troop; reſts 2, &c.

For the Foot.

Mid. Lothian. 900, one regiment, &c.

The ſaid eſtaits nominates who are to be collonells in the ſeveral ſhires.

The committees of warre of certaine ſhires have power to convert ſundry of the foot into horſe att the rate of one horſeman for three footmen, as the collonells ſhall deſire.

The eſtaits foreſayde ordaines the committees of warre, with adviſe of the ſhire collonells, to ſit daily for ſetling the numbers of horſe and foot, and appointing officers; and that they ſend in the officers names to the committee of parliament.

The ſayd eſtats ordaines foot an dhorſemen to have good armes, and if they have none to bring money to buy them.

The heritors, &c. to ſet out their men with 30 dayes proviſion for ſome, and for others with 40 dayes proviſion.

The committee of ware to provide armes and ammunitions they can, and to diſtribute them, and to train the ſoldiers.

Committees of warr and collonels are to appoint places of rendezvous; the committees of warr are to cauſe beacons to be erected, and to give advertiſement thereof to their neighbouring ſhires, &c.

The eſtates of parliament ordaines all noblemen, gentlemen, heretors, liferenters, fewars, and woodſetters to come forth themſelves under a certayne payne, viz. of being eſteemed infringers of the covenant, and of being puniſhed by death, infamy, loſſe of their moveables, and forfaultor of a third part of their eſtatts; except the burgh of Edinburgh, &c. and except perſons debarred from publick truſt.

They ordaine alſo that upon the ſaid invaſion, or the ſight of the beacons the whole perſones fenſible riſe in armes.

Laſtly, they ordaine this act to bee printed and publiſhed att the Markett Croſſe of Edinburgh, and declares that none ſhall pretent ignorance after this intimation.

The kings life guard to command the voluntiers anent, 80,000 Engliſhmen to be imployed in our army.

3 July 1650.

It is the opinion of the committee of conference, that inſtead of the act of poſture to avoyd confuſion by the coming together of the whole fenſible perſones, there ſhall be a ſelect number throughout the whole ſhires of the kingdome to be in readineſs to march, and to draw to the ſtanding forces of the kingdome when advertiſed by beacons or orders from the committee; and that the proportion ſhall be the juſt number both of horſe and foot of the preſent leavy, the number whereof is herein preſented to the parliament, by and attour the whole noblemen, gentlemen, heritors, lyfrenters, fewers, and woodſetters, who are to be ordained to come forth under the paynes hat be contayned in the act of poſture, and under the higheſt and ſtricteſt puniſhment that can be expreſt, death, infamy, loſſe of all their moveables, and forfaultor of the third part of their eſtates; and as to the bordering ſhires, and other ſhires where the actuall invaſion ſhall be, upon the ſaid invaſion, and upon ſight of the beacons, the whole perſones to riſe in armes and draw together to the ſtanding forces of the kingdome, as they ſhall have advertiſement by beacons or orders.

Memorandum. To repreſent to the parliament that there be a lifeguard of horſe appointed for the king's majeſtie; and that the earle of Eglantin be nominated for that charge.

That the Iriſh companyes be deſigned to be a lifeguard of foot.

That there be ſome perſon of worth and quality appointed to have charge of ſuch ſtrangers or Scottiſh voluntiers as may be uſefull for the ſervice, and againſt whome there is no exception.

That the ſomme appointed to be furniſhed by the burroughs for their proportion of foot be applyed towards the defraying of the king's neceſſary and perſonall charges with the burden of tenn thouſand markes for the caſtles of Edenburg and Inchgartie.

That it be carefully lookt to if there be any faithfull Engliſhmen in this kingdome who hath bin conſtant to the covenant, and cauſe that may be made uſe of, to the effect it may appeare that the leavy is not carryed on by nationall intereſts.

Dorso, Edinburgh, 3 July 1650.

The eſtaits of parliament approves the ſecond, third, fourth, and ſixt articles within written; and the fift article agreed to with this declaration, that the ſame ſhall be allowed to the burrowes in any ſubſequent levyes. If the horſe to be leavyed furth of the ſhires bee not taken out and made uſe of. And that the ſumme of 5000 merkes, with the bygan, annuall rents, reſt and be payt out of the firſt of the ſaid 80,000 merkes to John Hamilton, apothecarie, for the which hee had the lord marquis of Argyle, Mr. Robert Berkley, and Henry Kennedy, cautioners. And that ſuch aſſignments as the parliament made to them for their releif be applyed for entertaynment of the king's houſe.

Report from the committee of conference.

Anent the inſtructions to be ſent with the commiſſioners to the king's majeſtie.

28 Junii 1650.
Read and Paſt.

27 Junii 1650.

The committee appointed for conference with the comiſſioners from the church thought it meet, that ſome perſons ſhould be ſent to congratulate his majeſties happy arrivall into this kingdome. And to ſhew his majeſtie how glad his people were to heare that it has pleaſed God to move his heart to give ſatisfaction to their deſires, and that it would be very acceptable to them, that to teſtify his reallity therein he would likewiſe forſake and abandon the company of malignants; and that his domeſticek ſervants, and ſuch as are about him might be well affected to the cauſe and not malignant; and ſuch as are otherwiſe be removed and put from about him, but in a faire and diſcreet way.

And having conſidered the liſt of his majeſties ſervants and others of the train ſo farr as it come to their knowledge, the committee aforeſaid thought it fitt and neceſſary that the perſons after following, viz. the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earle Forth Lauderdale, Sir Robert Dalzell, L. Sinclair, Doctor Frazer, L. Wilmott, L. Wentworth, Secretary Long, Mr. Uder, Earle of Cleveland, Mr. Seymor, Viſcount Grandiſon, Mr. Progers, L. Withrington, Mr. Rogers, Sir Philip Muſgrave, Col. Darſy, Col. Gray, Col. Boynton, Major Jackſon, Dr. Goff, Mr. Harding, corrupt chaplaines, and Sir Edward Walker, ſhould forthwith remove themſelves and depart out of the kingdome; and ſuch alſo as have ſerved in armes againſt the cauſe, and been evill inſtruments, and given bad counſell to his majeſties late father and himſelfe; and likewiſe ſuch others as upon information from our commiſſioners ſhall be thought fitt to be removed.

Edinburgh, 28 Junii 1650.

This article approven, and all the perſones names ordained to ſtand and appointed to be inſert in the inſtructions to be ſent with the commiſſioners.

And the committee thought alſo fitt in the election of the officers of the army ſpeciall care be taken none be made choice of but ſuch in whome the kingdome may confide, and that a committee be appointed to make up a liſt of ſuch officers as ſhall be well qualifyed and deſerve truſt in the publique ſervice; and that the purging of the army be proſecuted ſpeedily and effectually, and the committee appointed for that effect be preſently nominated.

And conſidering how neceſſary it is for ſecurity of the kingdome that the towne of Leith be fortified with all ſpeed, the committee aforſaid thinkes fitt that the country people in the places and pariſhes adjacent, within 12 miles about Edinburgh and Leith; the towns of Lithgow and Hadington being includit, as likewiſe the ſaid towne of Edinburgh; and the ſoldiers that were formerly appointed for theſe workes, ſhould ſpeedily repaire thither with materialls, and effectually goe about the compleating of the workes; and for the better accelerating and perfitting thereof, that the workes ſhould be diſtributed amongſt them, and ſeveral places deſigned to the pariſhes and companyes for makeing up their parts of the workes, and that a ſelect committee be appointed to ſee this orderly, ſpeedily, and effectually done, and declares that the ſoldiers ſhall worke every day, they getting their owne ordinary pay allanerly.

Edinburgh, 28 Junii.

The parliament for the firſt article ordaynes that two of every eſtaite ſhall be ſent to his majeſtie.

For the ſecond article, that it bee repreſented in a faire way to his majeſtie, that the Scottiſh noblemen, gentry, and others conteined in the laſt act of parliament, be forthwith removed out of the kingdome, without prejudice, to proceed further againſt them as accords with the law; and that all other Scottiſh men not ſpecifyed in the act of parliament, and yet men mentionate in this article, be preſently removed furth of the kingdome, and that ſome troopes be appointed to attend the commiſſioners in putting theſe orders in execution.

And as concerning the Engliſh mentionate in this article, ordaines the commiſſioners to repreſent to his majeſtie in a faire way, that the Engliſh noblemen, gentlemen, and others ſpecified in this article, be preſently removed out of this kingdome; and that this alſo be intimate to the perſones themſelves, declairing to them, that this kingdome will give them noe protection; and therefore that they remove themſelves forth of this kingdome within eight dayes after intimation hereof made to them, or publiſhed at the mercat croſſes of Edinburgh and Aberdein, otherwayes the eſtaits of this kingdome will ſeiſe upon their perſones and diſpoſe upon them as they ſhall thinke fitt; and that in the meane tyme they remove themſelves from the verge of the court, and not be permitted to have acceſſe to his majeſtie.

Rex vicecomiti Dublin. ſalutem:

Cum alias oneraverimus, dilectum & fidelem noſtrum Nicholaum Dagworth militem, nuncium noſtrum verſus terram noſtram Hiberniæ, &c. ut ſupra, uſque ibi tranſmitti volentes, & tunc ſic; tibi præcipimus, quod convocatis coram te magnatibus & communibus comitatus tui, duas perſonas laicas, hujuſmodi poteſtatem, tam pro ſe, quam dictis magnatibus & communibus optinentes, de eorum communi aſſenſu, eligi, &c. ut ſupra, uſque ibi remittent', & tunc ſic, & hoc ſub pœna centum marcarum, de te & communibus comitatus tui, ad opus noſtrum levandarum, nullatenus omittatis. Teſte, &c. ut ſupra.

Cujuſquidem brevis returni tenor talis eſt:

Nicholaus Houth & Ricardus White electi ſunt per magnates & communes comitatus Dublin. ad comparendum coram domino rege, & conſilio ſuo in Angliam, citra quindenam purificationis beatæ Mariæ, unde iſtud breve facit mentionem, ubicunque tunc fuerit in Anglia, plenam poteſtatem, per prædictos magnates & communes habendos, ad tractandum & conſulendum, cum ipſo domino rege, & conſilio ſuo, ibidem, ad ipſum dominum regem informandum, ſuper ſtatu & gubernatione terræ ſuæ Hiberniæ, abſque aliqua poteſtate per prædictos magnates & communes, prædictis Nicholao & Ricardo conceſſa, concordand. prædictos magnates & communes, onerare de aliquibus oneribus ſuper eis impoſterum imponendis, propter diverſa quæ per prædictos Nicholaum & Ricardum tunc ibidem declarabuntur. Et ſuper hoc, pro eo quod quamplures de ſufficientibus hominibus comitatus Dublin. per quandam petitionem ſuam, ſub eorum ſigillis ſigillatam, conſign. gubernatori & cuſtodi, ac cancellario, & aliis de conſilio domini regis in Hibernia, monſtrarunt & certificarunt, quod ipſi electioni dictorum Nicholai & Ricardi non conſentierunt, quorum nomina in certificatione prædicta, præſentibus annexa, plenius inſeruntur, de aviſamento dictorum gubernatoris & conſilii, adverten. qualiter diſcenſio & variatio ſuper electione prædicta intervenerunt, pro omni altercatione in ea parte amovenda, concordatum fuit, quod literæ domini regis patentes, ſub magno ſigillo ſuo quo utitur in Hibernia, fratri Thomæ Scurlak abbati domus ſancti Thomæ Martiris juxta Dublin. theſaurario domini regis in Hibernia, & Roberto de Preſton capitali juſticiario de communi banco Hiberniæ, ad intereſſend. electioni in hac parte faciend. & ad eam ſupervidend. & de nominibus ſic eligendorum; & ſi de communi aſſenſu dictorum magnatum & commun. vel majoris partis eorundem electi fuerint, necne in cancellaria domini regis in Hibernia certificand. prout in literis prædictis, præſentibus annexis, plenius continetur: ac breve dicti domini regis vicecomiti Dublin. de convocando dictos magnates & communes, in præſentia dictorum theſaurarii & juſticiarii, ad electionem hujuſmodi de eorum communi aſſenſu faciend. & de nominibus ſic eligendorum, in cancellariam prædictam certificand. prout in eodem brevi præſentibus ſimiliter annexo, plenius poterit apparere, mandari deberent. Qui quidem theſaurarius & juſticiarius, virtute dictarum literarum in dictam cancellariam returnarunt, quod viginti & quatuor perſonæ elegerunt Nicholaum Houth & Willielmum Fitz-William, & viginti perſonæ elegerunt prædictum Nicholaum & Ricardum White, prout in returno inde præſentibus annexo, ſatis conſtat; ac dictus vicecomes returnavit, quod magnates & communes meliores dicti comitatus elegerunt prædictos Nicholaum & Ricardum, & alios non tenentur eligere, prout in returno ſuper dicto brevi confecto, & præſentibus annexo, plane liquet. Et quia viſis returnis prædictis, præfatis gubernatori & conſilio conſtabat, prædictos Nicholaum & Willielmum per majores & ſufficientes dicti comitatus electos exiſtere, iidem gubernator & conſilium electionem dictorum Nicholai & Willielmi duxerunt acceptandam: et ſuper hoc, de aviſamento dictorum gubernatoris & conſilii, aliæ literæ patentes ipſius domini regis, præfatis theſaurario & juſticiario miſſæ fuerunt, continentes quod ipſi, omnes perſonas prædictas, una cum aliis magnatibus & communibus dicti comitatus, coram eis ac vicecomite vel coronatore comitatus prædicti venire facerent, ipſoſque ad concedend. poteſtatem ſufficientem, prædictis Nicholao & Willielmo, tam ad concordand. quam tractand. & conſulend. compellerent: et de eo quod inde facerent, in cancellariam prædictam certificarent, prout in eiſdem literis præſentibus annexis plenius poterit apparere; quarum quidem literarum returnum patet in quadam cedula eiſdem literis conſuta. Et pro eo, quod dicti magnates & communes, in diſcenſione & altercatione ut prædicitur, perſeverant, ne negotia regia in hac parte expediend. propter hujuſmodi ſingularem diſcenſionem ſive altercationem, diutius retardentur, tam literæ & brevia prædicta, quam returna eorumdem modis quibus fiunt, de aviſamento dictorum gubernatoris & conſilii, coram domino rege in Angliam tranſmittantur.

Conſimile breve dirigitur vicecomiti Loueth. ſub eadem data.

Tenor returni brevis prædicti ſequitur in hæc verba:

Prætextu hujuſmodi brevis, convocatis magnatibus & communibus comitatus Loueth. iidem magnates & communes de eorum communi aſſenſu, una voce dixerunt, quod ipſi, juxta jura, privilegia, libertates, leges, & conſuetudines terræ Hiberniæ, a tempore conqueſtus ejuſdem & ante, uſitat. non tenentur eligere, nec mittere aliquos de terra prædicta, ad Parliamenta, nec conſilia in Anglia tenend. ad tractand. conſulend. & concordand. prout hoc breve requirit; tamen ob reverentiam domini noſtri regis Angliæ, & propter urgentiſſimam neceſſitatem dictæ terræ, & populi fidelis ejuſdem, ad præſens, ſalvis præfatis communibus juribus, privilegiis, libertatibus, legibus, & conſuetudinibus prædictis, concedunt Rogero Gernon & Ricardo Verdon, per ipſos electis, ad transfretandum ad partes Angliæ, ibidem coram domino noſtro rege comparend. plenam poteſtatem ad tractand. conſulend. & concordand. ſuper ſalvatione, defenſione & bona gubernatione terræ prædictæ. Except. tamen, quod non concedunt præfatis Rogero & Richardo, poteſtatem concedendi aliqua onera ſeu ſubſidia ſuper ipſos ad præſens imponenda, propter paupertatem dictæ communitatis, & propter magnas expenſas ſuas quas cotidie tam in inveniendo homines ad arma, hobelarios, & pedites, in defenſione marchiarum dicti comitatus, erga fortiores Hibernicos, Hiberniæ inimicos, & rebelles domini noſtri regis Angliæ, & propter illas cauſas & alias, quas prædicti Rogerus & Ricardus coram domino noſtro rege & ſuo conſilio in Anglia, declarabunt, aliter ad præſens reſpondere non poſſunt.

Conſimile breve dirigitur vicecomiti Kildar. ſub eadem data.

Tenor returni brevis prædicti ſequitur in hæc verba:

Prætextu hujus brevis, convocatis magnatibus & communibus comitatus Kildar. iidem magnates & communes, &c. ut ſupra, uſque ibi; prout hoc breve requirit, & tunc ſic; ob reverentiam tamen domini noſtri regis, & voluntatis ſuæ, ac mandatorum ſuorum complementum, ac propter urgentem neceſſitatem, pro ruina & inopia dictæ terræ, & populi fidelis ejuſdem, domino regi declarand. hac vice, concedunt poteſtatem Johanni Rocheford & Petro Rowe, per ipſos magnates & communes electis, ad tractandum, conſulendum & concordandum, cum ipſo domino rege, ſuper ſtatu & gubernatione ejuſdem terræ, abſque aliqua poteſtate eiſdem electis conceſſa, ad ipſos magnates & communes, erga dominum regem in aliquo onerand. Ita tamen quod dicta conceſſio ſive miſſio dictis magnatibus & communibus, in futuro, non cedat in prejudicium jurium, privilegiorum, libertatum, legum & conſuetudinum prædictorum, quibus ipſi magnates & communes a tempore conqueſtus Hiberniæ inconcuſsè & inviolabiliter uſi ſunt & gaviſi.

Conſimile breve dirigitur vicecomiti Cathirlagh. ſub eadem data.

Tenor returni brevis prædicti ſequitur in hæc verba:

Prætextu hujus brevis, convocatis coram me apud Cathirlagh. communibus comitatus Cath. & perlectis coram ipſis, omnibus & ſingulis articulis in hoc brevi contentis, qui omnes & ſinguli coram me unanimiter allegarunt, quod nullam perſonam laicam, coram domino rege & conſilio ſuo in Anglia, ad tractandum ibidem ſuper articulis prædictis, propter eorum inſufficientiam & inopiam, ac frequentes deſtructiones, roberias, & depredationes, quæ ante hæc tempora diverſimode ſuſtinuerunt & indies ſuſtinent, per Hibernicos inimicos & rebelles domini noſtri regis comitatus prædicti, dictum comitatum undique invadentes & deſtruentes, citra quindenam purificationis beatæ Mariæ in hoc brevi content. ad ſumptus ipſius comitatus tranſmittere poſſunt; ac etiam, prædicta communitas coram me eorum ſacramenta preſtiterunt, quod non ſunt cultæ & manuoperatæ in comitatu prædicto, in manibus ligeorum domini regis, præter quatuordecim carucatæ terræ, omnibus computatis, & quas quidem inſufficientiam & inopiam, Galfridus de Valle & Phillippus de Valle milites, electi pro communitate comitatus prædicti, ad comparendum in Parliamento tento apud Kilkenn. coram gubernatore domini regis Hiberniæ, ac cæteris de conſilio ibidem in octab. ſancti Michaelis prox' præterit', coram . . . . . . gubernatore, & Nicholao Dagworth milite infraſcripto, & dicto conſilio allegand. proteſtan. quod . . . . . perſonam coram domino rege . . dicto conſilio ſuo in Anglia, ad ſumptus dictæ communitatis, & cauſis præmiſſis, tranſmittere potuerunt.
